End of the long personal and political friendship between Mayor Key and Police Chief T. O. Sturdivant appeared near yesterday as Key opened his campaign for renomination for a new term with a vigorous attack on William B. Hartsfield, his opponent, and told members of Atlanta Post No. 1, American Legion, Sturdivant will retire as chief December 1.

Sturdivant met Key's statement with the assertion he has no intention of quitting, although it was said Sturdivant was in Key's presence when the mayor dictated the statement which he read at the Legion meeting.

Just before Key opened his address at the Legion luncheon meeting, Hartsfield issued a statement charging Key with an attempt to oust Sturdivant.

"The Key crowd and the police politicians are in a desperate panic and have employed over a hundred paid workers to rush out among the people and spread all sorts of false rumors about me," Hartsfield said.

"Every organization which contains within it a large number of voters is being approached with false

President Looks to Time When Only People Between 20-50 Will Toil.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—(AP)—President Roosevelt told the World Power conference today additional "meritorious" federal power projects might be used to break a "vicious circle" he said was adding to the cost and limiting the use of electricity.

Power experts from half a hundred nations, assembled in Constitution hall, a few blocks from the White House, applauded the President's speech.

He told them it was their duty to prepare for a time when half the population may be able, through power developments, to "provide the basic machine-made products necessary for the welfare of the whole population."

He suggested also a possibility that through electricity "over-centralization" of industry created by the use of steam power might be broken up.

Starts Boulder Power.

As he finished, the President pressed a button that sent an electric impulse across the nation to massive Boulder Dam and put its powerful generating turbines in motion.

The huge blue and cream hall was filled nearly to capacity and the delegates roses applauding as the President stepped onto the platform and an army band struck up "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Attired in a double-breasted blue suit, the President frequently wiped his forehead with a white handkerchief, while men and women in the audience used newspapers and programs for fans.

Near the end of his 2,000-word address, Mr. Roosevelt recalled that years ago the electrical wizard, Charles Steinmetz, had said that electricity is expensive because it is not widely used and because it is not widely used it is expensive.

"That observation," he said, "still holds true. There is a vicious circle which must be broken and wise public policy will help to break it."

Can't Harm Industry.

Already, he said, the government has promoted construction of several vast reservoirs, chiefly for navigation and reclamation, but with genera-

Martial Law Looms In Delta Liquor Drive

JACKSON, Miss., Sept. 11.—(AP)—Governor Hugh White left his office this afternoon for Brandon to deliver personally an ultimatum to law enforcement officers to "clean up" reported saloons and gambling houses in east Rankin county.

In the event, Sheriff Tom Shann and deputies fail to act promptly in the "clean-up" drive, Governor White said he would take personal charge of the situation.

It was believed that if deemed necessary he would call out national guardsmen, and declare martial law in a sweeping raid on reported gambling and liquor dispensing clubs in East Jackson.

East Jackson is a suburb of Jackson just across Pearl river in Rankin county.

FRANKLIN TO FIGHT FOR OCONEE POST

Qualifying Rule Protest May Be Taken Before Convention in Macon.

Judge O. J. Franklin, of Eastman, may carry his fight for election to the judgeship of the Oconee superior court to the Democratic nominating convention at Macon October 7, it was reported yesterday.

The judge was barred from qualifying in the state primary election on a committee rule interpreted by Mrs. Eleanor Orr Roan, secretary of the state Democratic executive committee, and concurred in by Chairman Hugh Howell, of the committee.

Mrs. Roan, in refusing to accept the judge's entry, asserted he had failed to comply with committee rules requiring that a personally signed statement of entry be made. Judge Franklin telegraphed his entry to the executive committee, accompanying the telegram with his entry fee, which was acknowledged by the secretary.

Judge Franklin later protested the ruling of Chairman Howell and Mrs. Roan to the subcommittee of the state Democratic executive committee, but that body upheld the action taken by the chairman and Mrs. Roan, declaring that Judge Eschol Graham, of McRae, the incumbent, was the only qualified candidate.

Judge Graham introduced Governor Talmadge at McRae when the Governor opened his campaign for election to the senate seat to which Senator Richard B. Russell Jr. was re-elected.

It is understood Judge Franklin may seek to have his name as a candidate placed on the ballot in the November general election in addition to that of Judge Graham.

If the plea is granted, thereby allowing a choice by the voters between the two, neither candidate, it is understood, would be declared the Democratic nominee, but both would make the race as Democrats.

Cobb Says: Two Unspoken Lines . . .

By IRVIN S. COBB.

(Copyright, 1936, by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Sept. 11.—The unfairest tragedy of an actor's life, especially in the movies, is that, while a woman gets old, a man merely gets older.

Once the bloom of youth quits your lovely leading lady, there's a long, heartbreaking wait before she plays mothers or maiden aunts or friends of the family. For that harsh detective, the camera, never yet let a wrinkle pass for a dimple. Truly, in this game, an actress' face is her fortune.

But while Frankie Bailey was comely enough, she always put her dependence upon her faultless legs. And now, at the age of 70-odd, still trim, still gallant, still spry, she is presenting her two lifelong sources of support in a revival of "The Black Crook." She always had her outstanding lines, although she never spoke one on the stage. She still has them—glory be!

So here's to you, dear Frankie Bailey. You whom I worshipped from a gallery seat at Weber and Fields' 35 years ago—here's to you and your legs. Long may they wave!

REDS SPURN TRUCE IN SPANISH REVOLT

Oviedo Is Set Afire as Government Planes Bomb North Rebel City.

MADRID, Sept. 11.—(AP)—The Spanish government announced that the northern Rebel city of Oviedo had been set afire by bombardments, and took a firm stand against truce or compromise in the civil war tonight.

"This is a fight for life or death," one government spokesman said, and volunteered that he felt sure the Fascist high command felt the same way.

While reporting its customary daily list of government victories, a high government official sought to reassure foreigners that genuine foreign industries in Spain, seized at the outset of the rebellion, had been returned to the control of the owners.

Apologies for "regrettable errors" in government seizure had been made where they were due, said Jose Benito, executive secretary of the committee for government intervention in industry.

Those industries incorporated as "Spanish societies," however, he said, would be treated as if they were industries controlled by Spaniards

In the proclamation of the Oviedo victory the government announced that their guns prevented Insurgents fleeing the city. Buildings, including a Carmelite convent, were afire, the report said, as government artillery sent round after round of bombs into the city.

(The Fascists radio station at Seville, however, broadcast that government attackers had been driven back from Oviedo.)

The government, meanwhile, was sending additional troops to the fronts nearer Madrid where the Insurgents

Zephyr's Sister Ship Arrives in Bermuda

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Sept. 11. (UP)—The Deutsche Lufthansa flying boat, Aeolus, which took off from the deck of the mother ship, Schwabenland, a few miles off the Azores last night, arrived at 4:30 p. m. today.

The Aeolus is a sister ship of the Zephyr, which arrived at Port Washington, N. Y., last night from Horta. Both flights were in connection with surveys being made by the German air line in its plans for establishment of a regular trans-Atlantic airplane service.

The Aeolus is expected to take off at 8 a. m. tomorrow and arrive at Port Washington between 2 and 3 p. m. to join the Zephyr. Both planes will then await arrival of the Schwabenland on September 16 when preparations will be made for the return flight to the Azores.

The Aeolus made the 2,063 miles from Horta to Hamilton in approximately 22 hours.

Press Hails Downfall of Talmadge As End of 'Buffoon,' 'Demagogue'

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—The sound defeat administered Governor Eugene Talmadge and other Roosevelt critics by Georgia voters Wednesday was the subject of widespread editorial comment in eastern papers today. Without a dissenting voice the newspapers commenting on the primary hailed the election of Senator Richard B. Russell Jr., and Governor-elect E. D. Rivers as a happy ending to a type of campaign that has been too familiar in the south in the past.

At the same time it was agreed that the Talmadge defeat marks the end of anti-New Dealism in the south.

Evidence of the nation-wide interest in the Georgia primary is found not only in the editorial comment of today, but in the manner in which newspapers generally treated the election returns. Governor Talmadge's defeat was considered front-page news in practically all the metropolitan papers of the east, many of them printing headlines over dispatches telling of the Russell-Rivers landslide.

"Cheering news," is the caption on a leading editorial of the Baltimore Evening Sun. "Red galluses have their place in the world, no doubt, but that place is not the senate of the United States," said this usually fair and impartial afternoon daily.

PERRY AND KNIGHT, REMOVED IN 1933, WIN NOMINATIONS

Court of Appeals Race Nip and Tuck Contest Between Dave Parker, Jule Wimberly Felton.

James A. Perry, former chairman of the Georgia Public Service Commission, and Perry T. Knight, former member of that body, who were ousted by Governor Talmadge in 1933, won nominations to their old posts in Wednesday's primary, according to late tabulations last night.

Perry had a county-unit vote of 212 votes to 100 for Ben T. Huiet, a Talmadge appointee, and 96 for C. D. Rountree, third extrant.

Knight had 230 unit votes as against 160 for T. K. Davis and 18 for J. L. Harrison.

The heaviest vote ever cast in any election in Georgia was recorded in the primary, in which Senator Richard B. Russell Jr. won renomination again over Governor Talmadge in one of the greatest political landslides in Georgia's history.

Rivers Nominated.

Ed Rivers was nominated governor over Charles D. Redwine, a Talmadge-sponsored aspirant, by an overwhelming vote.

Tabulations based on returns compiled by the Associated Press were from each of Georgia's 159 counties.

BLUM SUMMONS STRIKERS, OWNERS

Extraordinary Meeting of Pact Signers Called in Face of Added Strife.

PARIS, Sept. 11.—(AP)—The spread of occupation strikes led Socialist Premier Leon Blum tonight to call an extraordinary meeting of the signers of the accord which settled the first wave of walkouts faced by his government when it took office in June.

Blum set the meeting of employers' organizations and labor leaders for Monday. Informed persons said the conferees would consider means of putting into effect as soon as possible laws for application of the 40-hour week and collective labor contracts, pushed through parliament by Blum's administration.

The Metal Workers' Union sought to allay fears that leftist workers planned to seize the Renault automobile plant outside Paris in "an experiment" to Sovietize the factory.

Leaders of parliament opposition to the government's neutrality stand, nevertheless, continued "viewing with alarm."

Jean Mintigny, moderate deputy, announced he intended to question Premier Leon Blum when the chamber reconvenes on "intrigues which are tending to impose dictatorship on certain parties, labor unions, or on the country."

Textile Workers Walk Out.

Workers at the Licorne automobile factory in Paris struck today over the discharge of ten employes.

Cobblers in the Paris region deserted their benches for a meeting in protest over not having any vacations.

Roger Salengro, socialist minister of the interior, induced textile workers at Lille, where there are 30,000 idle, to evacuate their mills pending arbitration of the strikes.

Tonight union representatives in the Renault factory claiming support of 34,000 workers admitted they were "worried" by rumors that some workers planned to take over the plant.

The Renault plant situation was reported to the government earlier in the day by a delegation of 1,500 foremen and technicians.

Farms Seizure Feared.

They told Premier Blum that the movement was instigated by communists, and asked him for a government guarantee that non-union employes would be assured of their rights

Crowd of From 15,000 to 20,000 in Lakeland Public Square Scream Approval of Victors Over Talmadgeism in Primary Ballot.

L. A. FARRELL,
Staff Correspondent.

LAKELAND, Ga., Sept. 11.—Before a crowd which screamed its acclaim, Governor-elect E. D. Rivers and Senator Richard B. Russell Jr. spoke here tonight in one of the greatest demonstrations ever accorded in south Georgia to successful candidates for office.

Between 15,000 and 20,000 enthusiastic citizens converged on the hometown of the governor-elect, the crowd gathering from all sections of the state, especially from southern Georgia.

A motorcade from Atlanta, which attained 300 automobiles by the time it reached here late today, added its share, and at points along the route, throngs gathered to greet the senator and the next governor. Hundreds of spectators along the way sought a glimpse of the winners of the election.

Speaking on the public square, as no public building was adequate to hold even a small portion of the throng, Governor-elect Rivers declared that "a new day will dawn in Georgia soon after January 1."

He expressed his pleasure at the warm reception given him by his hometown people, thanked them for their aid during the campaign, and briefly outlined the issues in the recent victorious race.

He stated that the people of Georgia, by their overwhelming vote, the largest ever cast in the state, had indorsed the platform as set forth by him.

Reference to President Roosevelt brought prolonged applause.

Referring to Senator Russell, Rivers said, "Now we have a distinguished visitor in our city tonight, Senator Richard B. Russell.

"The meeting last night at Winder, the senator's home town, and the one

HITLER DISPLAYS STRENGTH IN AIR

Projected Maneuvers Add Significance to Attacks on Jews, Bolshevism.

NURNBERG, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Four hundred trim warplanes nestled in their hangars tonight ready to roar aloft Monday in what air force leaders predict will be an unprecedented display of Germany's power in the air.

The projected maneuvers were given added significance by the vehement anti-Bolshevist and anti-Jewish orations of leaders high in the Nazi party councils.

The populace of Nurnberg, where 800,000 Nazis are assembled for their annual party convention, tonight turned their cheers for their orators to cheers for the officers of their air force—with everyone wondering what surprises would be brought out for them Monday.

The importance which Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler attaches to his air force in the forthcoming maneuvers was noticeable in the "tent city" where 20,000 Nazi soldiers are encamped.

Of these nearly half are air force men.

"Surprise packages" for the populace in the shape of huge tanks were also hinted. The army high command, however, carefully concealed what equipment it would roll out in the way of tanks and artillery.

The roaring warplanes—all the way from tri-motored bombers to

Tropical Disturbance Is Reported in Gulf

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 11. (AP)—Two tropical storms, both of them far from any part of the United States mainland, held the Weather Bureau's watchful eye tonight.

One, first reported developing yesterday morning, was about 400 miles east by north or east-northeast of St. Thomas island in the Leeward group at the time the San Juan, Puerto Rico, weather bureau issued its afternoon advisory.

This storm, described as of moderate intensity, was said to be moving west-northwestward or northwestward.

The second disturbance was reported forming this afternoon in the Gulf of Mexico about 225 to 250 miles northeast of Vera Cruz, Mexico. The New Orleans weather bureau located this storm center in the Gulf of Campeche, an arm of the southwest Gulf of Mexico.

SABOTAGE EFFORT ADMITTED BY NAVY

Blaze on Cruiser Was 'Undoubtedly' Planned, High Official Asserts.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(AP)—An inquiry board at the Brooklyn navy yard tonight hunted evidence of sabotage in a small fire on the U. S. S. Indianapolis last August 25, which one official described as "undoubtedly deliberate."

The cruiser, which served President Roosevelt as a "floating White House" for several days in 1933, went to sea today to test repairs made in the navy yard since June 10.

She is scheduled to sail Tuesday to rejoin the American fleet on the west coast.

Captain C. A. Dunn, manager of the yard, said the fire was caused by a short circuit in a cable through which two nails were found driven.

"Undoubtedly Deliberate."

"No damage was done to the ship," he said in a statement. "The damage was confined to the cables. . . .

"Two nails were found in one circuit in a fire room. One nail was found in another circuit but that wire

CHICAGO, Sept. 11.—(UP)—The National Progressive Conference, attended by 118 Liberals of various party designations, late today voted endorsement of Franklin D. Roosevelt for president to present a united front for "the only progressive candidate who can be elected."

The conference also decided to wage an aggressive campaign for the re-election of the President through state committees and to raise money for the election campaign. Several thousand dollars was collected at the convention today.

Reactionaries Back Landon.

Reason for their decision was contained in a resolution adopted unanimously, which said:

"All reactionaries are united to regain political power and to retain economic power. Progressives must be united to attain the two objectives essential to the preservation of the American form of government, namely increased production of wealth and a fair distribution of wealth as it is produced year by year."

In a telegram sent from his summer home at Waupaca, Wis., Senator Norris told the Progressive gathering continuance in office of the President was "not only of national importance, but it has an important bearing upon the civilization of the world."

Norris said "We should not think of changing leaders while we are crossing the stream of an unprecedented depression, coupled with the cruel hardships of nature."

The senator described Roosevelt as the "only president since his illustrious namesake, whose heart beats in sympathy with the pulsations that

Sen. Norris Accepts Call To Make Race

LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 11.—(AP)—Senator George W. Norris, veteran Nebraska Independent Republican, today accepted a petition nominating him as an independent candidate for re-election.

He announced his decision in a letter received today by James E. Lawrence, Lincoln editor and chairman of a bi-partisan "Norris-for-senator committee."

"I had hoped," the 75-year-old senator said, "that I might retire from public life. Now comes this petition from more than 40,000 of my constituents. I cannot lightly cast aside their request, coming from so large a number of liberty-loving people. Regardless of my personal wishes, I feel it to be a duty I owe them to accept this nomination."

New Third District Congressman, Stephen Pace, New Deal Supporter

Americus Lawyer Elected To Succeed B. T. Castellow.

AMERICUS, Ga., Sept. 11.—(AP)—Meet Stephen Pace, new Georgia congressman.

Pace, nominated in the state primary over Hollis Fort, of Americus, a fellow townsman, will succeed Third District Representative Bryant Castellow, of Cuthbert, who is retiring to private life.

He is 44 years old, and has been practicing law here more than 20 years.

Pace is a supporter of the New Deal.

In his campaign he told the voters that people of the district "want a representative in congress who will be a loyal supporter of the President. I have at all times given the President my sympathetic and active support and will continue to do so.

"Some have advised me to stay quiet or go easy as to supporting the present administration, but it is my opinion that the President has and always will do everything he can for the general good and the best interest of the people. I shall not compromise that conviction."

It was Pace's second race for congress. He ran against Castellow two years ago and polled some 11,000 votes, to about 13,000 for Castellow, a political power in his district. The election was on the county unit system.

The new congressman has served in both houses of the state legislature. He advocated legislation looking to greater efficiency and economy in government. He obtained passage of a local bill placing Americus on a budget system under which a floating debt was liquidated and city finances stabilized. Pace also introduced bills which abolished the office of county purchasing agent and county treasurer, and consolidation of the offices of tax receiver and tax collector. His first bill in the legislature sought to place the state on a budget system. The idea in this bill later became a law in Georgia.

He wrote the law establishing a state auditing department to examine the books of each state agency.

The nominee has been active in Americus and Sumter county civic affairs, has served as president of the Americus and the Southwestern Circuit Bar associations, as president of the Americus Kiwanis Club, as president of the Chamber of Commerce and has been active in other civic and religious affairs.

During the Mexican trouble in 1916 he served as a private on the Mexican border.

In the same year he married Miss Grace Ragan, of Hawkinsville. They have two children, a daughter, Martha, 16, and a son, Steve Jr., 13.

STOLEN GOODS FOUND, SUSPECT IS ARRESTED

Two city detectives who last night investigated a burglary at the home of Mrs. G. R. Boyd, of 1720 South Gordon street, returned to police station a short while later to find the clothing she had reported stolen.

While the detectives were answering the burglar alarm, Detectives J. A. Preston and H. C. Newton arrested James Harris, 29, of 282 Newport street, on a charge of suspicion of burglary. Investigating a tip, they found and confiscated a quantity of women's apparel, bed clothing and a hat at Harris' house. Their fellow policemen said the clothing confiscated was that which Mrs. Boyd had reported stolen. She valued it at $30.

HARTSFIELD TALKS TO CITY EMPLOYES

Mayoralty Candidate Urges Hearers To Turn Deaf Ear to Key.

Declaring that "if the Key administration is continued, city employes will have to be cut again to keep Atlanta out of bankruptcy," William B. Hartsfield, high vote-getter in the recent mayoralty race, addressed employes of the city sanitary and construction departments at the city garage yesterday afternoon.

"Key has pleaded with the voters to give him just one more term," said Hartsfield, "and he promised never to ask for it again. Since he admits he will never be a candidate again, he can afford to promise you anything and then leave you holding the bag."

Hartsfield urged his audience "not to listen to promises of all sorts of raises."

Struck down, police said, by Sam Shapiro, operator of the store, who chased him for more than a block, Bell's head struck the sidewalk. He died a few minutes later from what Dr. C. M. Irvin, city coroner, said was a brain hemorrhage.

Shapiro was arrested on a charge of murder. He furnished bond of $2,000 for a police court hearing tomorrow.

Dead Man Is Leading In Race for Constable

TUSCON, Ariz., Sept. 11.—(AP)—A dead man, unopposed while living, was far ahead tonight of a field of 108 who sought his job as constable in Tuesday's primary.

Election officials tonight had counted 658 votes for Fred "Kid" Wilding, veteran officer and former owner of Tuscon's famous silver dollar saloon. His name was printed on the ballots before his death.

The vote was far greater than that polled by any other candidate.

Victory Has Reached Baby-Naming Stage

Russell Jr., renominated to the senate over Governor Talmadge, and the Rivers being the family name of House Speaker E. D. Rivers, nominated governor over C. D. Redwine, Talmadge-sponsored candidate.

PATROLMAN MURPHY FIRED BY COMMITTEE

Dismissal Follows Conviction of Drinking While On Duty.

James W. Murphy, patrolman, last night was found guilty and dismissed upon conviction of charges of being under the influence of intoxicants while on duty and in uniform. The action was taken by the public safety committee of council at its regular meeting.

Murphy contended he was under the influence of a drug which he took because he was ill. A score of witnesses appeared for the defense.

The vote on dismissal was as follows: For: Reynolds, Haire, Hester and Sutton. Against: Ball.

An adverse report will be submitted to city council on an ordinance submitted by Councilman Alvin L. Richards to close all places selling beer and wine at midnight and forcing them to remain closed until 6 o'clock the following morning if the business is located outside the inner fire limits. The ordinance provided for an exception if citizens living wthin 200 feet of the establishment agreed in writing that the place could remain open.

A new permit was issued to the Vismor Soda Company, at 435 Forrest avenue, N. E., the establishment in which Ralph Owens was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct several months ago when policemen heard him berating fellow officers who had arrested him several days previously on another charge. The former permit was revoked shortly thereafter.

STURDIVANT TO QUIT, KEY SAYS, CHIEF DENIES

information to the effect that I am opposed to something in which they may be interested."

Swap Is Hinted.

Although the mayor refused to comment further on his statement that Sturdivant will retire, it was believed the mayor plans that Sturdivant shall become chief of the detective department, a post now held by Assistant Police Chief A. Lamar Poole, and that Poole will be elevated to the chief's position.

When asked specifically about the reported swap, Key said he had no authority to make any shifts.

"Whatever is done about electing chiefs or making any other shifts is a matter for the police committee, which has authority over the department," Key asserted.

The mayor recommended that a board of citizens, similar to the one now operating Grady hospital, be established to run the police department if changes in the control of the department are necessary.

Hartsfield Accused.

Key intimated Hartsfield received money for obtaining passage of an amendment to city building ordinances, and charged specifically that Hartsfield attempted to divide $500 with present Mayor Pro Tem. Ellis B. Barrett, saying "it was Barrett's share for the part he took in passing the steel ordinance."

During the afternoon, Barrett explained Hartsfield was not a member of council when the alleged incident occurred, and that Hartsfield had a right to accept a fee for professional services.

"I want to be absolutely fair about this," Barrett said. "Mr. Hartsfield was not a member of council when this occurred in 1929."

"Racket" Is Charged.

Key flayed Councilman Bridges, former chairman of the ousted police committee, and linked him and Hartsfield in a "racket" in the award of contracts to tow in wrecked automobiles from city streets.

"Now whether 'Mayor' Hartsfield and Chairman Bridges are going to clean up the police department like they cleaned up the automobile business remains to be seen," Key said.

"If the public wants that kind of cleaning process to go on, it is within their power to have it."

Both Hartsfield and Key said Sturdivant had agreed to "retire voluntarily."

"On good authority, I understand that on Wednesday, Mayor Key called Chief Sturdivant to his home and told him he must get out as chief immediately, in order to save the present administration, and let Poole take over the job," Hartsfield said in his statement.

"It makes no difference to the people what last-minute changes the Key crowd attempt to make in the police administration. They are sick and tired of the entire mess and are going to vote to clean them all out from the mayor down."

Sturdivant Statement.

Sturdivant met the assertions with:

"I have no intention of quitting. I have made no such promise to anyone. I am remaining chief as long as I choose and I am not taking orders from anybody. When I quit, it will be voluntarily. I have no such plans at present."

To any further questioning, Sturdivant referred to George Finch, his personal attorney.

Sturdivant, Finch and Sturdivant's executive secretary, C. C. Brooks, were in a prolonged conference at the station during the afternoon, it was reported.

Sturdivant last night admitted he had been with Key during the morning, but said, "I don't know anything about any statement being drawn up."

Finch asserted his conference with Sturdivant during the afternoon was "purely social."

Concerning the reports that Key already has Sturdivant's signature to an agreement to change jobs with Poole, the chief declined to comment. Finch advised him "not to talk." Poole also declined to say anything about the matter.

Members of the public safety committee, which now has control of police administration, met last night, but the purported agreement to swap jobs of Poole and Sturdivant was not broached.

The mayor opened his bid for nomination and his attack on Hartsfield with what observers regarded as his version of an expose of intrigue in the old police committee, headed by Councilman G. Dan Bridges.

"Successors" Named.

Police Captain G. Neal Ellis, Lieutenants R. H. McLean and E. W. Ginn were said by Key to have been decided upon by the committee as successors to Chief Sturdivant, Chief of Detectives Poole and Assistant Chief A. J. Holcombe.

Key told the Legionnaires that police officials are under the control of the safety committee of council, and are under civil service. He said he never attempted to tell committeemen how to vote on any matter, saying it would not be within the realm of propriety any more than it would be for a governor to appoint a judge and then suggest how the judge should try cases. The mayor said he had given suggestions only when asked specifically.

Key referred to the fact that former Police Chief James L. Beavers was "fired three times," and said he had been reinstated three times. The police committee had the right to do what it willed in the Sturdivant trial he said.

Mayor's Statement.

"But now I'm going to tell you what is wrong with the police department," Key said.

"During the course of this (Sturdivant's) trial, one of the members of the committee got drunk, and spilled the beans. It developed that before this committee had preferred charges and proceeded to trial, a majority of them at least had agreed upon a slate of men who were to take the places of the present officers, who were to be removed.

"This was before any evidence was submitted, or before any trial was had. According to this slate, Captain Ellis was to be made chief of police in place of Sturdivant. Lieutenant McLean was to be made assistant chief and chief of detectives, in place of Chief Poole, and Lieutenant Ginn was to be made assistant chief in place of Chief Holcombe.

"But please remember that in the course of the investigation by the police committee of the police department, it developed that on Roosevelt Day there was a great poker game and a great crap game at the police station; but as soon as it developed that Captain Ellis was a star performer in the poker game and Lieutenant McLean was a star performer in the crap game, the whole matter was hushed up and that was the end of that part of the investigation. These men happened to be favorites of the then police committee."

Statement on Sturdivant.

Following is Key's statement to Legionnaires regarding Sturdivant's intention to quit:

"There should not be in this campaign any issue concerning Chief Sturdivant, because I have Chief Sturdivant's pledge of honor that he will voluntarily retire from the office of chief on December 1. He placed it that way, because he does not want himself or his office to become a political football. This pledge was made some months ago, before any of the present issues arose.

"Chief Sturdivant is by nature and by training one of the most gifted detectives this or any other city ever had; along those lines are the lines where he is best fitted to give his services to the people of the city."

Hartsfield's Statement.

Text of Hartsfield's statement follows:

"The Key crowd and the police politicians are in a desperate panic and have employed over a hundred paid workers to rush out among the people and spread all sorts of false rumors about me.

"Every organization which contains within it large numbers of voters is being approached with false information to the effect I am opposed to something in which they may be interested.

"On good authority, I understand that on Wednesday Mayor Key called Chief Sturdivant to his home and told him he must get out as chief immediately, in order to save the present administration, and let Poole take over the job.

"It makes no difference to the people what last-minute changes the Key crowd attempt to make in police administration. They are sick and tired of the entire mess and are going to vote to clean them all out, from the mayor on down.

"Taxicab Politicians."

"The plain truth of this campaign is that Atlanta is being run by a regency, consisting of a small group of police and taxicab politicians who are in a desperate struggle to hold their grip on the people of Atlanta.

"From reliable sources I understand it is their intention to flood Atlanta with a series of last-minute charges of every kind against me, but it will do them no good.

"I am going to remain true to the 9,000 good people who gave me their support and made me the plurality winner in the first election. For their information I am still standing on my platform and nobody on earth can induce me to make any trades or compromises which would vary it one jot.

"Atlanta wants an end to crooked police politics and I welcome the chance to demonstrate it with my election.

"Literally thousands of people are coming to my headquarters and pledging their support. We are going to win this next race over three to one. All I ask of my friends is to meet these last-minute rumors and charges with a smile and then let's all go to the polls on the 23d and wipe this crooked bunch out of existence."

Hartsfield Statement.

Hartsfield, later in the day, issued the following statement:

"Key's Legion speech was the signal gun for a barrage of the foulest sort of rumors and lies, which have been circulated all over Atlanta by a crowd of over a hundred paid workers.

"These poor dupes are supposed to be working for $5 a day, which they will never get, and already several of them have come to my headquarters and complained they were not paid off.

"Key's speech was written for him by Ellis Barrett and another lawyer whose name will come out later in the campaign. Barrett is the late 'unshirted hell' candidate for county commissioner, who lost his own shirt.

"His charges are a tissue of lies from start to finish and both Key and Barrett know it.

"A few weeks ago Key was assuming a saintly attitude, deploring mud-slinging and calling for dignity in campaigning. Now that he has seen the handwriting on the wall, he is yelling like a stuck pig and talking about taking his gloves off.

"Just let them rave. I am willing to endure all the filth and slime they can sling at me, in order to prove that the great majority of our citizens want Atlanta restored to decency.

"And this they are going to do by a tremendous majority on September 23.

here tonight, with both of us present, means that soon there will be complete co-operation in Washington and in Georgia with the great Roosevelt administration, which has done and will continue to do so much for the masses of the people."

Senator Russell, introduced by L. L. Patten, leading Lanier citizen, briefly reviewed the campaign issues and stated that the people of Georgia had stamped their approval on the Roosevelt administration and their disapproval upon a race of "vituperation, misrepresentation and abuse."

A great demonstration greeted the senator, who thanked the throng for the warm welcome accorded him, not only in Lakeland, but along the entire route from Atlanta.

Harmony in Prospect.

He said that as "soon as there is an administration change in Georgia early in January, there will be complete harmony between the agencies in Washington and the officials in Georgia."

"This will mean that better and more prompt service will be rendered the state by the congressional delegation in Washington," he said.

W. L. Miller, chairman of the Democratic executive committee of Lanier county, presided. Tom Miller, brother of W. L. Miller, and representative-elect from the county, presented Rivers, who was unable to speak for several minutes due to the prolonged cheering and applause.

Other Speakers.

Other speakers included DeLacey Allen, of Albany, nominated Wednesday as lieutenant governor, a post to be voted upon in the November election, and George Hamilton, who was ousted as state treasurer by Governor Talmadge and who was overwhelmingly re-elected in Wednesday's election; Perry T. Knight, fired from the Public Service Commission, and Columbus Roberts, commissioner of agriculture-elect; J. Harold Saxon, of Quitman, president of the Georgia Education Association. A large number of the members of the house and senate, past and nominated, Wednesday were also present.

Congressman Braswell Deen, of Alma, militant Roosevelt administration leader, who emerged victor September 9 over two opponents, also speaks.

Nation-wide Victory.

"The victory we celebrate tonight," he said, "is not only Georgia-wide, but nation-wide. Democrats from Maine to California, as well as Republicans, had their eyes on Georgia last Wednesday, and the great victory piled up for Senator Russell and Governor Rivers will be echoed throughout the nation and will cause many hesitant votes to swing into the Roosevelt column. Georgia has spoken, Democracy has reason to be jubilant, and our state has reason to be proud of the result."

Allen expressed confidence that the amendment providing for a lieutenant governor in Georgia will be ratified in the November election, and pledged his undivided attention and unswerving fidelity to the administration in presiding over the state senate, if seated.

Hamilton spoke briefly of his vindication, saying there was never any doubt in his mind that he would be elected to the post from which he was ousted by Governor Talmadge.

Motorcade Route.

Motorcade stops were made en route at McDonough, Forsyth, birthplace of Governor Talmadge, whom Senator Russell defeated Wednesday and which was carried by both Rivers and Russell; Macon, Perry, Cordele, Sparks, Adel, Nashville and Ray City.

Many friends of the house speaker in Florida came to pay homage to the man who will serve as the next governor of the state.

Mrs. Rivers and Miss Geraldine Rivers were introduced, as were Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Rivers Jr. and their daughter.

ROBBERY OF TWO MEN REPORTED TO POLICE

A negro placed a knife against the neck of F. Smith, of 150 Brantley street, N. E., representative of an insurance company, on Jackson way last night, and robbed him of a watch valued at $40 and of $7.50 in cash, according to police reports.

Smith told police he went to a lunch stand at Jackson and Gartrell streets to collect the premium on a policy, and that while there the negro accosted him, saying he "would like to talk about a policy." He said they were walking along the street discussing a policy when the negro robbed him.

Two men who told G. C. Payne, of 835 North avenue, they would "buy him a drink" if he would accompany them to an alley between Central avenue and Pulliam street, held him up and robbed him of $35 in cash, police reported last night. Payne said one of the men hit him with a pair of brass knucks.

DEFEAT OF TALMADGE HAILED BY NEWSPAPERS

as a "representative of the seamier side of southern politics, the conservative Washington Post catalogued his "rabble-rousing proclivities" along with those of Cole Blease, of South Carolina, and J. Thomas Heflin, Alabaman, of more recent memory.

"To gain a following," continued the Post, "as his speeches at the so-called 'grass roots' convention held at Macon last January clearly indicated, Talmadge was not adverse to arousing the meanest and basest emotions. That gathering revealed the Georgia governor as a candidate for the mantle of the far abler and shrewder Huey Long. Moreover, it was marked as much by its Ku Kluxery and Hitlerist borrowing as by its rabid anti-New Dealism.

"The senate will be a better place for Talmadge's failure to find a seat there. The Democratic voters of Georgia are to be congratulated for having done the nation a good turn."

The New York Times believes that the re-election of Senator Russell, like that of Senator Harrison, whose real opponent was his colleague, Mr. Bilbo, "is a sign that a too-familiar type of the southern demagogue is on its way to extinction."

"Gene's Bluff Is Called."

Commenting on a recent statement of Governor Talmadge that "government is nine-tenths bluff," the Times rejoices that "Gene's bluff is called."

"Preposterous in its original sense," comments New York's leading daily, "this assertion of Talmadge applies perfectly to his methods of government since he began to covet the laurels of Huey Long. He started well as governor. He reduced taxes and the state deficit. His imitative megalomania took him into many sorts of exhibitionism and arbitrary methods. State guardsmen protected his sacred person. He set himself above the legislature, other state officers, the law. His Huey Longism grew until he reminded old heads of that once famous postmaster who wrote that he was a 'bigger man than old Grant.'

"Always eager to get money from Washington for his state, he struck the hand that fed him. His grass roots convention, his attempt to revive racial prejudice, his refusal to call a Democratic primary, his campaign for the senatorship on a grotesque platform, his effort after all his blackguarding of the New Deal to have himself sent to the senate to 'save' Mr. Roosevelt from those wicked advisers from whose agencies he had so often solicited great sums of money, are fresh in the public mind. Farmers were glad to eat his barbecues. His campaign must have raised the price of chickens, pigs and beeves. 'Gene' gives a good show. As a hurler of epithets he is in fine Olympic form. Member of two Greek letter fraternities and using excellent English in his private talk, he considered it due 'to the people' to treat them to the choicest eccentricities of grammar, syntax and pronunciation.

Played All His Tricks.

"Finally he always exhibited his 'red suspenders' unfortunately accompanied with a belt, as a symbol of his identification with the farmers or of his fiery devotion to their causes. He played all his tricks. When his barbecues and his speeches had stopped sizzling and the votes were counted, he was found to be pitiably, ignominously beaten. All his candidates for state offices were hopelessly beaten. How could it be otherwise?"

Again, the Washington Daily News, a strong New Deal advocate, joins Talmadge with the fast disappearing caravan of "blotherskites."

"Eugene Talmadge has gone the way of all blatherskites," declared the News.

"Webster defines blatherskites as a noisy, talkative fellow.

"Maybe blatherskite doesn't sufficiently cover the type. Perhaps demagogue is more inclusive. Anyway, the history of this sort is that they rise, they shine about for a spell, and then they sink. The speed of their fall being in ratio to the rapidity of their rise and to the excesses in which they indulge while they are up. So there is nothing very surprising in the fact that Talmadge, of Georgia, has departed this political life and from now on must be content with being pointed out, as he skirts the edges of political gatherings, as among those who once were."

G. O. P. Plans Defeated.

And Frederic William Wile, Washington Star columnist, had the following to say of Talmadge's downfall:

"Republican hopes of smashing the solid south again this year—never very well founded—have received another knockout blow in President Roosevelt's adopted state of Georgia. Senator Russell's devastating defeat of Governor Talmadge consititutes an administration victory in a typical Dixie community exactly like the ones recently scored by Pat Harrison in Mississippi and Jim Byrnes in South Carolina. In all three states opposition to renomination of the incumbent senators was distinctly anti-Roosevelt in hue, so that the New Deal is entitled to crow lustily over the results. Georgia's repudiation of Talmadge is especially significant because the red-suspendered governor was the chief inspiration behind the shipwrecked attempt to organize Democratic revolt in the cotton and tobacco belts. The south is still solid."

Further in its editorial the Baltimore paper professed to see where President Roosevelt had been helped rather than injured by the Talmadge attack:

"Eugene Talmadge," said the Evening Sun, "has conducted a campaign against Roosevelt in such a manner that it has helped, rather than hurt, the President.

Talmadge's Clowning.

"Therefore, the fact that he has been licked in the Georgia primary means no loss to the opponents of the administration. If Mr. Roosevelt is beaten, it will not be by coarse and preposterous clowning, such as has been going on in Georgia, but by sensible arguments addressed to thoughtful men.

"But the result of the primary must give the active pleasure to people who dislike seeing American politics degenerate into mere buffoonery. Georgia, given the opportunity to choose between a mountebank and a man of some personal dignity, has voted in favor of dignity. Does this mark the turn of the tide? Is the state of Georgia, like Alabama on one side, and North Carolina on the other, beginning to pull herself together, getting ready to discard nonsense and act like a civilized state?

"It is too early to tell, but the beating administered to Talmadge at the polls is certainly ground for hoping for the best."

EFFORT TO SABOTAGE CRUISER IS REPORTED

was dead. This action was undoubtedly deliberate. The navy yard has no one under suspicion at the present time."

A navy intelligence officer said he could see no relation between the fire on the Indianapolis and previous hints of sabotage on the cruisers Quincy and Vincennes.

A more than ordinary guard was continued, however, about the six cruisers and cutters now in the Brooklyn navy yard in various stages of construction.

Officials at the yard continued conferences throughout the day but no one was under arrest tonight, the third naval district intelligence officer said.

Civilian Employes Fired.

Some 8,200 men were at work in ship construction at the yard, including 1,700 on WPA payrolls.

A "high naval official" quoted by the Los Angeles Times, said civilian navy yard workmen were displaced by navy personnel and Captain Dunn's statement confirmed that navy men completed the Indianapolis' overhaul.

The Quincy had two fires while she lay at a dock in Quincy, Mass., in August, 1935, but a navy inquiry was closed weeks later with a report "the cause was undetermined." One fire did $100,000 damage.

Last December a turbine was damaged by a nut dropped in a gear box, which navy officers later determined as "accidental."

Last February the Quincy went back into a shipyard with a cracked stern post but several weeks ago she played a hero's role in removing 85 American refugees from war-torn Spain.

An electrical fire a shore time ago slightly damaged the cruiser Vincennes, now under construction at Fore river.

Six New Vessels.

The Indianapolis was commissioned November 14, 1932, at a cost of approximately $11,000,000 without armament. She carries a crew of 600.

Work on the gunboat Erie is virtually completed at the yard. She has had her first sea trials but has not taken her shake-down cruise.

The cruiser Brooklyn is more than two-thirds completed but probably will not be launched until November, perhaps with President Roosevelt present.

Next to the Brooklyn, the Honolulu, another 10,000-ton six-inch gun ship, is being built and may be ready for launching early next summer.

When the Brooklyn slides off her ways, the keel of the Helena, another 10,000-ton cruiser will be laid.

The cruiser New Orleans is in the yard for a three months' overhaul and the coast guard cutters Alexander Hamilton and John C. Spencer are building in drydock, with a launching probably at the end of the year.

are encamped. In Toledo province a desperate attempt was expected from government troops striving to break the ring around their capital city.

In the Talavera De La Reina sector, west of Madrid, government militiamen today were reported to have brought the advance of several Fascist columns up short.

The Insurgents led by General Francisco Franco, so the reports said, had been fought to a stndstill near Arenas De San Pedro in Avila province.

On the Aragon front the war ministry said government forces had captured Quicena and Nueno.

HOPE FADES FOR SAN SEBASTIAN

SAINT JEAN DE LUZ, France, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Hopes that San Sebastian might be spared the demolition suffered by its sister-city Irun faded tonight in the smoke of renewed Insurgent bombardment.

One hour after the noon deadline set by the Fascist high commander for the city's unconditional surrender, the Fascist General Emilio Mola ordered his gun crews into action and the quiet of the Bay of Biscay again was split by detonations.

Reports brought to France from the besieged city told of pillaging breaking out, as the Basque Nationalists nominally policing the city sought to control their more militant adherents, the Anarchists.

Although official confirmation was lacking, it was understood that last-minute truce negotiations had snagged on the Insurgent refusal to accept nothing less than unconditional surrender of the city in payment for cessation of the bombardment.

The government leaders, who have sought for an armistice to save their city from sacking and destruction, repeatedly have said they were willing to surrender providing the victors would grant them amnesty.

Otherwise, the Anarchists vowed, they would burn the city themselves and shoot hostages if the Fascists approached nearer.

Mass evacuation of the strategic coastal city continued with men, women and children alike battling among themselves for places of refuge aboard the foreign war vessels and Spanish freighters in the harbor.

The Basque Nationalists shipped currency to Bilbao, and groups of hostages to Bilbao, still in government hands.

French gunboats stowed food supplies for the French residents of the coastal cities.

Tens of thousands of refugees tonight had by boat and by foot straggled across to safety in France.

PLAN PARK EJECTIONS.

MAMMOTH CAVE, Ky., Sept. 11. (AP)—Attorney General B. M. Vincent told the Kentucky National Park Commisison here yesterday that persons still residing on land turned over by the state to the National Park Service in the Mammoth Cave National Park area will be ejected as soon as the necessary steps can be taken.

tion of power as one of the "incidental values."

"This," he said, "may prove to be the force that breaks the vicious circle to which I have referred. If these are not sufficient, the influence of additional meritorious projects awaiting development can be added."

He remarked, however, that no one with forthright vision could convince himself that a public policy for promoting availability of electric energy "can really harm the electric industry which exists today."

Whether he had any specific future developments in mind such as the vast "power yardstick" program of the Tennessee Valley Authority, the President did not disclose. Congressional appropriations would be required for them.

Suggesting the creation of additional abundance did not depend so much on further scientific achievements as on "suitably organizing" those already here, the President said energy might be so directed that the people between 20 and 50 years of age would be able to produce all basic commodities needed for the entire population.

"If that condition should arise," he added, "it is the duty of you who would be so greatly responsible for it to think what would be the effect on our leisure, our culture and our way of life.

"I would suggest that the answer should not be left solely in the hands of bankers, government officials or demagogues."

Roosevelt Upheld.

Immediately before President Roosevelt stepped to the microphone, Joas Dos Reis, Brazilian minister of communications and public works, told the delegates "the American government is fully justified in the attitude which it has taken in controlling the power industry.

Sketching official power policies in both American continents, the minister concluded that "there is no doubt that the present trend of legislation is toward nationalization of sources of energy. . . ."

and reports were missing from only 30 of more than 1,700 precincts of the state.

A total of 391,148 out of about 500,000 qualified voters visited the polls, according to tabulations.

Senator Russell's tremendous lead was increased as additional reports came in, and also added to the handsome majorities mustered by Speaker Rivers.

Parker and Felton.

Dave Parker, of Waycross, and Jule Wimberly Felton, of Montezuma, were running a neck-and-neck race for judge of the state court of appeals. Felton had 156 county unit votes to 154 for Parker. Two counties were not heard from, Chattahooche and Hart. In the latter, workers were still counting votes. The candidate with the highest unit vote will be the nominee.

Returns left some doubt as to nomination to Prison Commission posts, but Clem Rainey appeared to have won the nomination for one of them to succeed his late father. Royal K. Mann opposed Rainey.

Rainey had 222 votes to 188 for Mann.

Late Tabulation.

The tabulation gave:

For senator: Russell 230,184 popular and 378 unit votes, with counties carried 143; Talmadge 136,443 popular and 32 unit votes, with counties carried 16.

For governor: Rivers 223,478 popular and 372 unit votes, with counties carried 142; Judge Blanton Fortson, of Athens, 33,438 popular and 8 unit votes, with counties carried 2; and Charles D. Redwine, of Fayetteville, 122,048 popular and 30 unit votes, with counties carried 15.

The official vote showed McIntosh county, which formerly had been listed in the Fortson and Talmadge columns, went to Rivers and Russell.

Talmadge Counties.

The tabulation showed Talmadge carried Bleckley, Cherokee, Dawson, Echols, Effingham, Fayette, Forsyth, Glascock, Quitman, Tattnall, Taylor, Telfair, Twiggs, Union, Webster and Wheeler counties. All the other 142 went to Russell.

In the governor's race, Fortson carried Clarke, his home county, and Walton, near-by.

The tabulation put these counties in Redwine's column: Bleckley, Dawson, Effingham, Fayette, Forsyth, Lincoln, Macon, Oconee, Oglethorpe, Peach, Quitman, Taylor, Telfair, Twiggs, Warren and Wheeler counties. Rivers carried the other 141.

Talmadge and Redwine both carried the following counties: Bleckley, Dawson, Effingham, Fayette, Forsyth, Quitman, Taylor, Telfair, Twiggs and Wheeler counties.

Other Tabulations.

Other tabulations showed the following county-unit vote:

Lieutenant governor: Allen 310; Pope 98.

Secretary of state: Wilson 410; Cook 0.

Attorney general: Yeomans 336; Strickland 48; Lester 24; Garland 0.

Treasurer: Hamilton 380; Daniel 28.

Comptroller general: Harrison 372; Parker 36.

Commissioner of agriculture: Roberts 340; Linder 70.

Public Service Commission: McWhorter 199; Anderson 191. Race in doubt.

Supreme court: Atkinson 360; Stephens 48.

PROFESSIONAL TAXES ORDERED COLLECTED

Henry C. Davidson, attorney appointed by the state to collect professional taxes in Fulton county, told Quinn fi. fas. have been issued against 375 professional men in the county, and asked that the sheriff's office proceed immediately in collecting them. In this tax classification come lawyers, doctors, dentists and other professional men and women.

CHATTANOOGA CHILD, 6, STRUCK BY TRUCK, DIES

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Sept. 11. (AP)—A 6-year-old child became Chattanooga's 26th traffic fatality today.

Harold Gault, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Gault, was run over and killed by a truck as he was en route home from school, which he entered just last Tuesday.

The truck driver was quoted by officers as saying the child ran in front of the truck from behind a parked automobile.

Roosevelt's Address on Power

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—(AP)—The following is the text of President Roosevelt's address today at the third world power conference:

I desire to add my personal greeting to the official greeting which it has been the pleasure of the government of the United States to extend to you.

The United States considers it an honor and a privilege to be the host of the third world power conference and of the second congress of the international commission on large dams.

The world power conference and its associated international commission are notable institutions.

It is one of the achievements of our generation that business men, engineers, lawyers, social workers and other people of affairs, should meet in international assemblies not merely for promotion of the abstract sciences and techniques in which they may respectively be interested, but for exploration of the application of these to national welfare and betterment of the conditions of human life. There are very special reasons why we in the United States prize the opportunity to provide the forum for discussion of the problems which are being presented to your conference.

POPULATION IN U. S. HAS SHOWN INCREASE.

We are relatively a young nation, facing now the problems of matured national life. Many among you represent nations of longer experience.

We have a strong conviction that any success we may have in organizing the household of this nation now come of age, will depend in large measure on the degree to which and the manner in which we make available the natural energies which have been given us in great abundance. We shall therefore study the records of your proceedings with painstaking care.

For a century population in the United States has increased, both naturally and by immigration, at an exceptional rate; but recently there has set in a decline in the rate of increase.

Experts in vital statistics now calculate that we shall have reached a point of stationary population within approximately the next 25 years.

75 PER CENT OF PEOPLE LIVE IN CITIES, VILLAGES.

For two centuries the dramatic aspect of national growth was territorial expansion—successive waves from the Atlantic to the Alleghany mountains, to the Mississippi valley, to the prairies, to the Rocky mountains, to the Pacific coast. The addition of improved lands has come to a stop; in fact, in many parts we have overdone it and must restore some of them to more natural conditions.

With these have appeared other evidences of maturity. For a period following the establishment of the union about 85 per cent of our people lived on farms. Today nearly 75 per cent live in cities and villages. During our earlier years the proportion of young people in the population increased much more rapidly than the proportion of old people. Today for various reasons, the proportion of old is increasing more rapidly than the proportion of young people.

ECONOMIC SECURITY CAUSES CONCERN IN U. S.

With such changes have come also changes in social habits and in points of view.

Under conditions of maturity of a nation there is, justifiably, an increasing concern on the part of nearly every citizen for his economic security. In the earlier days of our nation's youth there was no such dominating concern. As a people we could then be happy-go-lucky—a characteristic of youth.

National security requires that we have new points of view, and that we do some things in different ways.

This matter of economic security, I take it, is not to be achieved alone by aiming for restriction of national income—real national income—but by aiming for more abundant and more widely distributed national income. A satisfying standard of living and security, for a national household of nearly 130 million people, is to be realized only by high productivity, broadly and equitably distributed, and wisely proportioned with respect to its drain on natural resources and to the variety of human wants it is destined to satisfy.

SCIENTIFIC GENIUS DESTROYING 1 WORLD.

It is for such reasons that your deliberations are of significance to us, and will be followed with minute attention. Your scientific and engineering genius is destroying one world—the world of relative scarcity—but has it yet undertaken to create the new world of abundance which is potential in your community and over natural energies? Is creation of greater abundance dependent on further scientific and engineering achievements so much as on suitably organizing and utilizing the engineering already incorporated into your technique?

These two questions, more simply stated, resolve themselves into this: Are you and I paying enough attention to "human engineering?"

There are many aspects of the problem. For example, it is possible to conceive that the conversion and application of energy, in the coming generation, will be so directed that half of the population can provide the basic machine-made products necessary for the welfare of the whole of the population. We can conceive that this would mean that the people between 20 and 50 years of age will be able to produce the basic commodities for themselves and also for all others below and above those ages.

RESOURCE CONSERVATION AMONG FUNDAMENTALS.

If that condition should arise, it is the duty of you who would be so greatly responsible for it to think what would be the effect on our leisure, our culture and our way of life. I would suggest the answer should not be left solely in the hands of bankers, government officials or demagogues.

In anticipation of all manner of possibilities and simultaneously with the study of their far-reaching results, we can and must take every preparatory step now within our power.

Fundamental among these is conservation of resources; their evaluation in terms of the services they may render, including the conditions under which these may be rendered, and their utilization in the light of such evaluation. Although it is a principle of physics that energy can not be destroyed, it has been revealed by experience that man can destroy those particular forms of energy in which energy is usable by him. In such an evaluation the physical and mental energies of human beings must be included with coal, petroleum, gas, electricity and other forms.

HIGHER ACCOUNTING APPEARS ESSENTIAL.

To make such an evaluation, a higher form of accounting than any yet developed by commerce and industry appears to be essential. It must be a form of accounting that takes social values, now left to mere assumption, into its calculations and measures them. If a nation were to establish in its social balance sheet a capital account for its energy assets, and were to charge against that account the water it permits to go unused, as well as the coal and oil that are used; or if the petroleum industry were charged with the gas it permits to go to waste—a quantity that is enormous in the United States; then perhaps all citizens would perceive that public policy and private conduct in respect of natural resources should be quite different from what they now are.

STEAM ENGINE INVENTION GREAT EVENT IN HISTORY

It seems to me, a layman, that the outstanding gift of modern science and engineering to society is greater knowledge of the characteristics of electric energy, together with a very substantial degree of command over it. Its flexibility is what makes it impressive; its transportability; its divisibility.

The invention and adaptation to use of the steam engine was a great event in human history. It caused an industrial revolution; it remade the world. It created new social-industrial problems many of which are still far from solution. It is not irrational to believe that in our command over electric energy a corresponding industrial and social revolution is potential; that it may already be under way without our perceiving it.

NOW WE HAVE ELECTRIC ENERGY

One of the social changes brought on by the invention and use of the steam engine was the concentration of workers into large factories and of people into large cities. We have not known what to do about it. Workers had to go to the steam engine, whose energy could not be divided into parts and sent out to them.

Now we have electric energy which can be and often is produced in places away from where fabrication of usable goods is carried on. But by habit we continue to carry this flexible energy in great blocks into the same great factories, and continue to carry on our production there. Sheer inertia has caused us to neglect formulating a public policy that would promote opportunity for people to take advantage of the flexibility of electric energy; that would send it out wherever and whenever wanted at the lowest possible cost. We are continuing the forms of overcentralization of industry caused by the characteristics of the steam engine, long after we have had technically available a form of energy which should promote decentralization of industry. What is economically sound is to be determined by social accounting more than by present methods.

POWER IS A FACTOR OF GREAT IMPORTANCE

I had occasion recently to visit the great plains area of the United States where the greatest drouth in history has thrown an oppressive burden upon the people of those states. In planning for the better use of those millions of acres, power is factor of vital importance—power to be used primarily for the conserving of the water supply—power, the application of which is essential not only to the cities but to the farms and ranches of that whole area.

I speak of power in its many forms. It may be true, as I understand some of the authorities among you prophesy, that the world's oil reserves, because of their limited supply, some day may have to be apportioned to specific uses. It may be true that new applications of alcohol, processed from the products of the soil, may increase the usefulness of the internal combustion engine; but in any event it seems most probable that a greater use of electrical energy is absolutely essential in every sector, rural as well as urban, in the United States, and, indeed in the whole world.

SOUND POLICY TO LEAD TO ITS CONSUMMATION

A sound and courageous public policy will lead toward its consummation.

One who considers the matter with forthright vision can not convince himself that public policy for promotion of availability of electric energy can really harm the electric industry that exists today. It would give opportunity for that industry to add to achievements already great. The more integrated its sources of energy, the less it would require of excess capacity and the lower would be its costs. The broader the base of consumers of a product that is now classed as a necessity, the lower would be its costs and the greater its stability.

ELECTRICITY NOT USED BECAUSE OF COST

Years ago Steinmetz observed that electricity is expensive because it is not widely used, and it is not widely used because it is expensive. Notwithstanding reductions in rates and increase of consumption since his day—which, by the way, have demonstrated the truth of his words—that observation still holds true. There is a vicious circle which must be broken, and wise public policy will help to break it.

I still hold to the belief of two years ago, when I spoke as follows:

"We are going to see, I believe, with our own eyes electricity and power made so cheap that they will become a standard article of use, not only for agriculture and manufacturing, but also for every home within reach of an electric light line.

CHEAPER THE POWER THE MORE IS USED

"The experience of those sections of the world that have cheap power proves very conclusively that the cheaper the power the more of it is used."

These words were spoken at Grand Coulee. The government of the United States has promoted the construction of several great reservoirs, which you will inspect on your grand tour, primarily for navigation or reclamation, but with incidental values for flood control and the regulation of stream flow. Among other incidental values is the generation of electric power. This may prove to be the force that breaks the visious circle to which I have referred. If these are not sufficient, the influence of additional meritorious projects awaiting development can be added.

BOULDER DAM I CALL YOU TO LIFE

Two great dams of the Tennessee Valley Authority have been completed and are making their contribution to the public weal. Grand Coulee is far enough along to enlist your interest, as also is Bonneville. At Boulder Dam on the mighty Colorado, the gates were closed months ago; a great lake has come into being behind the dam; generating equipment has been installed in the power plant; and at this moment the powerful turbines are awaitig the relatively tiny impulse of electric current which will flow from the touch of my hand on the button which you see before me on the desk, to stir them to life and creative activity.

Boulder Dam; In the name of the people of the United States, to whom you are a symbol of greater things in the future; in the honored presence of guests from many nations, I call you to life!

PROGRESSIVES INDORSE F. D. R. UNANIMOUSLY

come from the breast of the common man. Under his leadership there has been some humanity written into the federal statutes," Norris said.

Norris' telegram said for three years the President had been "tried under the most difficult circumstances which have ever confronted a ruler of any nation."

". . . We love him for the enemies he has made and we should give him our undivided support in order that he may carry on to successful conclusion the war against oppression and injustice."

The convention resolution declared reactionaries are united behind Governor Alfred M. Landon, of Kansas, the Republican nominee.

"They know they cannot win against united progressives," the resolution continued. "Hence they hope to win by dividing progressives. Once attaining power they propose to keep it by whatever ruthless means are necessary.

Must Not Divide.

"In this critical situation divisions of liberals has only one result and that is direct support for reaction. Progressives, regardless of good motives, who aid in dividing those opposed to reaction, must share responsibility for the result."

Believing the next president will be Mr. Roosevelt or Governor Landon, the progressives said:

"Upon a strictly non-partisan basis, with complete reservations of freedom of action in the future, and not necessarily indorsing any political party, we urge all progressive minded citizens in every walk of life to vote for Franklin D. Roosevelt for president of the United States."

The conference said it was "evident that millions are now denied equality of opportunity, monopoly denies the fruits of mass production to the consumer, two-thirds of the people are constantly threatened with insecurity, the farmer buys in a monopolistic market and sells in a competitive market, labor is denied civil liberties, and depressions are inevitable under private monopoly and lop-sided distribution of wealth."

'Will Solve Problems.'

"President Roosevelt," it said, "has recognized these evils and has made a gallant effort to correct them. Given the power in the national government we are confident that President Roosevelt will courageously attack these problems and eventually solve them."

Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia, of New York, and Governor Philip F. La Follette, of Wisconsin, joined in sounding the keynote of the conference.

"The conservatives are united against us," La Guardia said.

"We must learn to stick together," La Follette declared, "the reactionaries will go to any end to split our ranks."

Those attending organized a national progressive conference supporting Mr. Roosevelt, with Senator Robert La Follette, progressive, Wisconsin, prime mover of the gathering, as permanent chairman of the central committee, and Senator George W. Norris, progressive Republican, Nebraska, as honorary chairman.

Campaign finances will be raised by contributions of $100 to $5,000. Several pledges were made immediately.

The progressives will function separately from the Democratic committee.

Charter Change Urged.

La Guardia advocated a constitutional amendment to permit congress to override supreme court decisions.

"There are certain basic principles which we as progressives advocate," he said. "It is very little comfort to get promises from candidates with a prepared alibi that the supreme court stopped their efforts.

"We believe in the constitution and refuse to let it be stretched to provide special privileges for a few."

Senator La Follette characterized the conference as "a clearing house for progressive sentiment."

The sessions of the conference were secret, but it was learned that at least some of the conferees attended in fear that the Union party candidacy of William Lemke, North Dakota congressman, backed by Father Charles E. Coughlin's National Union for Social Justice, may have turned some liberal support away from the New Deal.

La Guardia, declaring "the situation calls for political strategy of the hihgest order," was the first speaker after Senator La Follette called the meeting to order.

Senator Edward P. Costigan, Democrat, Colorado, and Miss Grace Abbott, former chief of the Federal Children's Bureau, were named honorary vice chairmen. Frank P. Walsh, of New York city, was chosen acting treasurer.

Comments.

Several conferees spoke over a nation-wide radio hookup tonight. A summary of their remarks:

Lewis: "Proponents of wealth and reaction cannot spend enough money to buy the American people."

M. W. Thatcher, Washington, representative of the Farmers' National Grain Co-operatives: "President Roosevelt and congress have given to agriculture every law which the majority of agricultural leaders have sought."

Senator Elmer A. Benson, Farmer-Laborer, Minnesota: "The chief business at hand of the progressives is to defeat Mr. Landon for president."

Thomas F. Neblett, New York, former president of the Student Federation of America: "Under the leadership of President Roosevelt, we are in a fair way to lift ourselves from a political and economic oligarchy."

George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks and vice president of the American Federation of Labor: "To divide progressives is the hope and clear purpose of the ractionaries. They cannot hope to win upon a clear and unmistakable understanding of the reactionary policies they desire to establish."

Those Present.

Senator La Follette was authorized to appoint an executive committee of at least 15, which will be completed in a few days, he said.

A roster of the independent political leaders of the nation attending today's conference included:

Senator Robert M. La Follette Jr., Wisconsin Progressive; Governor Philip F. La Follette, of Wisconsin; Representative Harry Sauthoff, of Wisconsin, Progressive; Representative Gerald Boileau, of Wisconsin, Progressive; Representative Gardner Withrow, of Wisconsin, Progressive; Representative George J. Schneider, of Wisconsin, Progressive; Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, of New York, fusionist; Senator Elmer Benson, of Minnesota, Farmer-Laborite; Senator Hugo L. Black, of Alabama, Democrat; Charles A. Wood, of Minneapolis; Representative Maury Maverick, Texas, Democrat; Frank P. Walsh, head of the New York State Power Authority; M. P. Davidson, New York city commissioner; A. A. Berle Sr., of New York; Representative Sam Massingale, of Oklahoma, Democrat; Representative Matthew Dunn, of Pennsylvania, Democrat; Representative Paul John Kvale, of Minnesota, Farmer-Laborite; Representative Ellenbogen, of Pennsylvania, Democrat; Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach, of Washington, Democrat; John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America; Representative Thomas Amlie, of Wisconsin, Progressive; Smith W. Brookhart, former Republican senator from Iowa; Sidney Hillman, of New York, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

Progressives Adopt 6-Point Platform

CHICAGO, Sept. 11.—(AP)—The national conference of progressives adopted the following set of principles today:

1. The right of every American to worship God according to the dictates of his conscience, to express his opinion through a free press and free assemblage; and to have an effective voice in his political and economic life.
2. The right of every American on the farm and in the city to earn a comfortable living by useful work and to receive for his work an income which the full productive capacity of society can afford.
3. The right of American youth to develop their talents through public education, adequately supported, and to find a place in the life and work of their country.
4. The right of men and women whose industry has helped to build the nation to face their declining years free from fear of want.
5. The right of labor to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing and free from interference by employers.
6. The right of every American to live under a government strong enough to suppress the lawless, wise enough to see beyond the selfish desires of the moment, and just enough to consider the welfare of the people as a whole.

fleet pursuit ships—routed Nurnberg from its beds at dawn today.

The uniformed watchers saw formation flying, with the bombers winging along under aerial convoy of dipping pursuit planes.

Thousands lined the streets to watch the maneuver's preview, while other thousands packed the congress halls to hear Hitler subalterns continue the oratorical war on Bolshevism and Jewry.

Hermann Reischle, Nazi agricultural leader, excoriated "the ruthless exploitation of Soviet Russian peasants for the benefit of a clique of Jewish parasites," and compared this with what he termed Hitler's efforts on behalf of German farmers.

Erich Hilgenfeldt, another departmental leader, described wholesale juvenile vagrancy and criminality which he laid at the door of Soviet Russia.

As the campaign grew in unabated vehemence, observers conjectured whether the bitter words presaged some definite move against Bolshevism or against Jewry or against both.

SCHOOLS OF DEKALB WILL OPEN MONDAY

Full Day's Schedule Planned in Decatur and County Institutions.

Decatur and DeKalb county schools will open for the 1936-37 school year Monday with a full day's schedule being planned for all classes, school officials announced yesterday.

In the Decatur school system, the Clairemont school, which is under construction, will not open at the regular time Monday, Superintendent Lamar Ferguson declared. He said that it was hoped the Clairemont school could be opened September 2, but that this date was only tentative.

"While we have no pre-registration for any except new students and for high school classifications we expect the normal growth of the student body which will give us approximately 100 more students this year than last," the superintendent said. "The high school classification this week showed that the enrollment would be slightly above the normal increase."

A slight increase in the number enrolled in the DeKalb county schools was also anticipated by the county school officials. The county schools do not have a pre-registration for any but new students.

MILLICAN'S VOTE IS SET AT 22,248

Fulton Candidate Wins Over Clayton Opponents by Overwhelming Ballot.

The official vote for State Senator G. Everett Millican in the thirty-fifth senatorial district was 22,248, it was announced yesterday by the senatorial committee after a tabulation of the votes cast in Fulton, Clayton and Henry counties.

Millican won overwhelmingly over W. V. Whaley and T. Q. Sullivan, both Clayton county residents, who objected to his entering the race on the grounds he was violating the gentleman's agreement whereby the senatorship is allocated twice to Fulton and once each to the other counties.

Whaley polled 9,627 votes in the three counties to place second, while Sullivan was last with a total of 6,774. Whaley won in Clayton county and Millican was last but the Fulton senator was victorious in Henry and his home county.

"I wish to take this opportunity of expressing my thanks and appreciation to the voters for this splendid majority given me in my race for re-election to the state senate from the thirty-fifth district," Millican said yesterday.

GRAND JURY PROBE TO OPEN TUESDAY

Five Indicted for Murder; County Affairs To Come Up Next Week.

Grand jury investigation of Fulton county affairs will get under way Tuesday and Friday, Foreman Elmer L. Stanley announced yesterday upon completion of routine business, which included indictment of five negroes for murder.

Stanley said he will appoint committees to probe each department at the Tuesday session, adding that some county department heads will be called before the jury Friday. All department heads and the county commissioners will be interviewed by the grand jury before the investigation actually begins.

Among the 14 true bills returned yesterday were those charging Albert Castelow, George Greer, Edgar Smith, Cleveland Woods and Julia Bennett, negroes, with the murder of other negroes. The grand jury returned a no bill in the case of Will Mangum, also charged with murder. All the killings took place between August 28 and September 1.

Solicitor General John A. Boykin, re-elected over William G. McRae in the recent state primary, yesterday issued a statement thanking the people of Fulton county for their support of his candidacy.

Solicitor Boykin said: "I am deeply appreciative of the loyal support given me in my campaign for re-election by the good people of Fulton county. It has been an honor to serve them in the past and it shall be my earnest desire to give them the best possible service in the future.

A majority of more than 7,500 given me is a splendid indorsement of my efforts to maintain law and order in this circuit. I am humbled by this magnificent majority, and realize that this indorsement was not of me personally but of the record which we have made.

"On the part of myself and staff, I pledge a continuance of impartial and consistent law enforcement in so far as it lies within our power to accomplish this important purpose."

CLUB WOMEN TO SEEK CRIMINAL SEGREGATION

The Atlanta Woman's Civic Council will undertake a determined effort to effect a segregation of criminals in the Atlanta prisons during the next few months, Mrs. J. E. Andrews, president, announced yesterday, following a meeting of the council in West End.

The council also voted to have a copy of Mrs. Andrew's pamphlet regarding the instructing of school children in morals, government, and knowledge of God, placed in the hands of every school principal in the city.

BRITISH TRADE UNION VETOES RED PROPOSAL

PLYMOUTH, England, Spt. 11.—(AP)—The British Trades Union congress decisively rejected a popular front alliance with Communists today.

With only a few dissenting votes, the congress approved a report of its general council, turning down a proposed united front against war and fascism.

The trade unionists took their stand after Sir Walter Citrine, their president, had delivered a sarcastic attack on Communism.

EDITH MAXWELL GETS NEW TRIAL

Supreme Court Reverses 25-Year Sentence Verdict of Accused Slayer.

STAUNTON, Va., Sept. 11.—(AP)—The Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals today granted a new trial to Edith Maxwell, under a 25-year sentence for the murder of her father in Wise county in 1935.

The court, however, refused to grant bail to the young woman, who has been in jail since her arrest July 21, 1935. A writ of error granted in the matter of bail was dismissed.

The supreme court's reversal of the verdict of a Wise county circuit court jury reopened one of the most celebrated legal cases in Virginia court history.

Miss Maxwell, 21-year-old school teacher, was convicted in November, 1935, of the murder of her father, Trigg Maxwell, in their cabin home at Pound on July 21, 1935.

She contended that she struck her father with a high-heeled slipper as he attempted to whip her in a family quarrel. She, her mother and a younger sister testified the father was drunk at the time.

ITALY CONTEMPLATES LEAGUE RE-ENTRANCE

ROME, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Italy will resume collaboration in League of Nations affairs, provided the Ethiopian issue is not raised to embarrass her, informed sources reported today.

The agreement was reached, these sources declared, during conferences between Premier Mussolini and Joseph A. C. Avenol, secretary general of the League.

(The Italian delegation to Geneva withdrew last June after Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia appeared to defend his demand the League punish Italy for aggression in East Africa.)

The Italian premier was reported as agreeing to forego insistence that Ethiopia cancel its membership in the League. He was represented as believing such a step is not necessary at this time although he sees the Ethiopian withdrawal as an eventual necessity.

At the same time, Il Duce was believed to have made it clear Italy could not be expected to participate in deliberations with either the Negus or his delegate present at Geneva sessions.

Brannan, Ollie Harris, Albert Lindley and Paul E. McDuff, all of Atlanta; William H. Gresham and William J. Gresham, both of Stone Mountain; Homer Cagle, of Alpharetta, and Richard J. Landon, En Route for Maine Speech, Makes Five Talks Through Indiana

ABOARD LANDON TRAIN EN ROUTE TO MAINE, Sept. 11.—(AP) Governor Alf M. Landon pushed his presidential campaign into Indiana today on a five-stop schedule of rear platform appearances as his special train rushed eastward toward Maine.

The Republican nominee will close the Maine state campaign with a speech at Portland at 8 o'clock (Atlanta time) tomorrow night in which he will discuss "Government and Business." The speech will be broadcast over the NBC red network. Maine's election is Monday.

Gary was listed for the Republican nominee's first personal appeal for votes in the Hoosier state. Next in line were Valparaiso, Plymouth, Warsaw and Fort Wayne.

With the Kansan as he left a Chicago conference with first-line party workers—precinct captains—were a number of Indiana Republican leaders, including Joseph B. Kyle, nominee for lieutenant governor; Lisle Wallace, of Sheridan, Indiana pre-convention manager for Landon; Representative Charles A. Halleck and David Hogg, Fort Wayne, congressional nominee.

Landon's Chicago visit lasted three and three-quarter hours. Met at an outlying station by George F. Harding, Illinois national committeeman; William Hard, Republican radio speaker; Raymond Benjamin, assistant to National Chairman John Hamilton, and other party officials, the candidate was motored directly to Harding's home behind a special police escort. He waved a good-by to a crowd of greeters.

"Old Bull Mooser."

As he entered Harding's residence, the Governor paused to shake hands with well-wishers along an iron fence. One described himself as an "old bull mooser."

"That's right," Landon replied, "we bull moosers have got to stick together."

Within the Harding home Landon conferred with about 80 precinct committeemen and Republican party leaders.

Among them was former Governor Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, who assured Landon he was ready to speak in his behalf.

Questioned by newsmen about his speech in Portland, Landon said:

"I am very glad to be on my way to contribute to the notable campaign which I believe will end in the repudiation of the present national administration by the voters of Maine next Monday.

"I am confident that Maine, as in the years past, will lead the way to a Republican victory in the nation and a restoration of good government at Washington."

Landon arose at 9 a. m. (Atlanta time) as his train sped through Illinois along tracks fringed for miles with sunflowers. After breakfast in his private car, he walked forward through the train, chatting with newsmen and conferring with aids and guests. The nominee said he felt fine.

Crowds were gathered along the tracks at Galesburg, Ill., and Streator, but the candidate did not make an appearance.

Landon's campaign attire was changed slightly from his previous trips. A much-waved straw hat gave way to a gray felt presented him by Mayor Ralph Mitchell, of his home town, Independence, Kansas.

U. S., INDUSTRY PLAN POWER CO-OPERATION

Proposal May Eliminate Competition Between Government, Firms.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 11.—(AP)—The News-Sentinel said in a copyrighted story it had learned that President Roosevelt and directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority are considering co-operation between the government and power industry as the basis of a new TVA power policy.

Under the proposed plan, the newspaper said, all power manufactured in the southeastern states would be pooled and served to customers at uniform wholesale rates over transmission lines of the TVA and the private power companies.

"The proposed power pool, some experts believe, would practically eliminate competition between the government and the private utilities in the manufacturer and transmission of electricity," the News-Sentinel said.

Open to Other Areas.

"It would put all municipal and private distribution systems and all industries in this region on the same basis in buying wholesale power; it would simplify the issue of municipal ownership of distribution systems, and if successful, it would be applicable to other areas served by government power projects."

The newspaper added that necessity for a new power policy arises because TVA's contract with Commonwealth & Southern Corporation expires in November. Under the contract the TVA interchanged and sold power to subsidiaries of the Commonwealth & Southern.

The story said TVA could follow three courses in negotiating a new contract with the power company.

"It can continue to sell power to private companies and compete with them for customers and in building transmission lines," the newspaper said.

"It can contract to restrict its operations to a specified area.

"It can get the utilities' co-operation in pooling power manufacturing and transmission facilities."

Third Plan Favored.

The President, the News-Sentinel continued, "favors the third plan.

"So does David E. Lilienthal, TVA power director, who has been studying it ever since he surveyed a similar arrangement in England—the 'British grid.'

"Chairman Arthur E. Morgan, of TVA, hopes the new power policy can be framed so as to eliminate the intensive fighting with the utilities. He looks with some favor on the restriction plan, if it can be arranged to what he regards as TVA's benefit. He feels that if TVA restricted its operations to a territory about the size of England, and had a monopoly therein, it could give a better demonstration of the yardstick principle."

The story concluded with a statement that "if the power companies decline to co-operate in the power pool, the government apparently is prepared to make a finish fight for its yardstick principle."

Edward Prolongs Stay In Austria, Liking Food

VIENNA, Sept. 11.—(AP)—King Edward VIII, of England, prolonged his Vienna visit today for two reasons.

1. He is taking ear treatment from a specialist.

2. He is enjoying the country, especially its food.

The king's lunch menu today included lobsters, mayonnaise, beefsteak, liberal amounts of vegetables and apfelstrudel. Trout and chicken also have been royal favorites on this visit.

After dinner last night the king and his companions visited several bars, at one place consuming five bottles of Austrian wine.

The king has told Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg how much he enjoys Austria's people, food and wines.

CHIEF OF U. P. IN ITALY EXPELLED BY FASCISTS

ROME, Sept. 11.—(AP)—The Italian government today handed Henry Gorrell, acting chief of bureau of the United Press in Rome, a written order of expulsion.

The order was the result of a story which said arrests had been made among high Fascist officials in accusations of Communist activities. The story was denied officially.

(On September 8 the Associated Press learned that some 20 persons had been arrested at Terni following the discovery of pamphlets, considered subversive, on the walls of munitions factory rest rooms. Disinterested townspeople, at the time, were inclined to view the arrests as of little importance, and there was no indication any of those held were connected with the Fascist party.)

Gorrell applied to the American embassy, which obtained a 24-hour stay in the expulsion order. The United Press bureau was appealing to the government to revoke the order.

2 ISLANDS FOUND

Soviet Explorers Discover Land in Arctic Waters.

MOSCOW, Sept. 11.—(AP)—A wireless message today from the Soviet ice breaker Sadko reported discovery of two islands in Arctic waters east of Franz Josef Land.

The ship's position was given as 81:12 north and 72:22 east, which would put it north and east of northern island, off the northernmost tip of Siberia.

The Sadko sailed from Archangel July 24 in search of a mysterious "land of high mountains' in the Arctic wastes, not seen since 1810.

Aboard was the most pretentious scientific expedition ever sent into the north by the Soviet, equipped with a floating laboratory, airplanes, deep sea diving equipment and apparatus for scientific, geografphical and meteorological studies.

The explorers planned a three-month expedition but were prepared to remain two or three years if necessary.

REARMED GERMANY

The statement of Chancellor Hitler before the annual convention of the Nazi party at Nurnberg that "in the past year I have restored full arms sovereignty to the nation," is not to be taken either as an idle boast or as indicating that there will be a slowing up in the huge program of armament construction which has for more than a year given the other nations of Europe a bad case of the jitters.

Undoubtedly Germany now has as large, or larger, armed force, both on land and in the air, and as huge a supply of armaments, as any other European nation with the single exception of Russia, but in that exception is contained the assurance that Germany's program of rearming has not yet come to full fruition.

England, France and Italy have all apparently come to the conclusion that Hitler is sincere in his protestations that, with the nullification of the Versailles treaty and the remilitarization of the Rhineland, Germany is, at least for time being, anxious to maintain friendly relations with them.

Every indication points to the fact that Hitler's course is pointing to a showdown with Soviet Russia, now the greatest threat to the Nazi regime. A treaty of co-operation has been entered into with Poland, despite the existence of the Polish corridor as a thorn in the flesh to the Germans; an understanding has been reached with the smaller nations of middle Europe by which a defensive barrier against Russia has been created across the continent, and it is believed that already a working agreement has been reached with the Tokyo government that should Russia attack either Japan or Germany the two would join hands against the common enemy.

Russia's real war strength is still problematical. Its announced standing army is the largest in Europe, totaling more than a million men—but the effectiveness of its fighters is an unknown quality. Its air fleet is the largest and its armaments the heaviest—but here again enters the question as to whether they are practical or modern and whether the still ignorant Russian masses can produce men capable of handling them in competition with the highly trained fighting men of Germany and other European nations.

It is this unknown quantity and quality of Russia's war machine that faces Germany, and it is a certainty that Hitler will not stop his armament program until he is convinced that, despite the smaller population of the nation as compared with Russia's 170,000,000 inhabitants, the balance of power would be on Germany's side.

GEORGIA WORK STOCK

A move for a sustained campaign to improve the work stock of Elbert county was started recently by County Agent Webb Tatum by the purchase of 22 young mares from South Dakota farmers, to be turned over to 4-H Club boys, who will have three years in which to pay the $100 cost of each of these animals.

The imported mares are two to four years old and weigh 1,000 to 1,100 pounds. They will be broken to harness and used in making crops and, in the meantime, bring in a mule or horse colt once a year.

Progressive fathers of the 4-H Club boys are solidly behind them in the new venture, as it will be the means of developing the breeding of work stock in that section, an industry that will be productive of new farm income.

There is no good reason why Georgia should not produce all the work stock required in the state. As the matter stands today, hundreds of mules are brought in from western states and sold to farmers at high prices—a constant drain upon those who overlook the opportunity that awaits their making a start in the production of all the work stock they need on their own farms and a surplus for sale to those who neglect this part of the program of living at home.

THE FIGHT IN MAINE

Governor Landon goes to Maine to save the state for the Republicans.

Maine was one of the six states remaining in the Republican column in the landslide of 1932. If any state in the country should be safe for the Republicans this year it is Maine. It has been consistently Republican for a half century, except for the Wilson election in 1912.

It is definitely revealed by a senate campaign committee report that $50,000 has been contributed to the Republican campaign fund by the du Ponts, Morgans, Rockefellers and other wealthy Republicans.

It is not surprising that this revelation has brought from the Democratic organization the charge that "the Republican party is attempting to dedicate the state of Maine to the domination of America's three wealthiest families."

Nor is it surprising that Governor Landon's announcement that he is going to Maine to join in what he terms "the first fighting repudiation of the New Deal" should be characterized by Democratic Governor Brann as a "definite confession that the Republican cause is exceedingly weak."

AIR-ROUTING THE ATLANTIC

The arrival in New York, with little attendant publicity, of a great German flying boat after a flight from the Azores as a leg of a trip to map the southern air route between Europe and America, emphasizes the vast progress made in transoceanic flying in heavier-than-air machines in the past decade, and promises early start of regular air service over this route.

Only a comparatively few years ago the entire world thrilled to the trip of a group of American navy airmen who made the perilous trip from the United States to Spain over the same route. Across the Atlantic was stretched a long line of destroyers and great trouble was experienced in alighting in the harbor in the Azores.

Practically unheralded, the German representatives of a commercial air company left their home airport, flew to the Azores and then continued their flight on to America. The 10-ton flying ship traversed the 2,390 miles between the Azores and New York in slightly over 22 hours. The distance between the Azores and the French coast being only about half as great, the air passenger over this route could eat breakfast in his home on one continent and dine the next day on the other.

Under the informal agreement which has been reached between the four great air powers—the United States, Great Britain, France and Germany—the northern air lanes via the great circle route from New York to Newfoundland to England has been tentatively assigned to America and Britain, while the southern route, via the Azores, has been given to the French and Germans.

While, of course, the air is free and any nation could send its airships over any route desired, the question of airports makes it necessary for co-operation in the establishment of transoceanic air lines. Thus under the tentative agreement reached, German and French air liners will be allowed to land in American airports if they use the southern route, and British ships, if they use the northern route, while American ships will be able to land in England if they arrive over the great circle route.

Indications are that the Germans may be the first to start regular heavier-than-air service over the north Atlantic, similar to that now being maintained over the south Atlantic to South American points. The development of the great clipper ships by the Pan-American in the regular service now being maintained from Miami to South America and in the mapping of the route from San Francisco to the Philippines, via Hawaii, places that American company in position where it can undertake trans-Atlantic service with a minimum of preparation.

Following the popularity of the lighter-than-air service between Germany and America inaugurated with the Graf Zeppelin Hindenburg, it is certain that before many months flying boats will be making regular scheduled trips between Europe and the United States.

We are happy to report continued progress in aviation. When you shoot for London now you make Wales, instead of Ireland.

A world series between two New York ball teams is about as close as this country expects to come to a civil war, thank you.

Palestine

Clashes of Mixed Population Put Country in Headlines

Mediation, with the aid of Arab leaders in Iraq, has been suggested as a means of ending the five-month-old "general strike" in Palestine. The strike, largely a walkout of Arab workers and closing of Arab shops in protest against Jewish immigration, has been marked by sporadic outbursts of violence, property destruction and loss of life.

"The British mandate of Palestine has undergone an amazing series of changes since the World War," says a bulletin from the National Geographic Society.

About Size of Vermont.

No larger than the state of Vermont and with only about thrice as many people, Palestine has virtually emerged from medievalism to modernism in a generation, the bulletin continues.

From Dan to Beersheba, and from the Dead sea to mountain top, west is meeting east. More specifically, this means modern tractors breaking soil alongside donkeys dragging primitive plows of Biblical times; young girls in "shorts and halters" rubbing elbows with veiled women; motor busses whizing around camel caravans while planes circle above; electric lights outshining olive oil lamps; and a tremendous influx of new residents, chiefly Jews from Germany, Poland and other parts of Europe.

For Palestine, long the outpost of the east and the inspiration of the west, has become a meeting place of both. But it is a mixing, not a melting pot. For centuries Moslem, Jew and Christian have lived here, and Jerusalem has been a holy city of all three faiths. Each, however, has rigidly maintained its own customs and traditions, often clashing, and at other times maintaining a sort of armed truce.

Moslems Lead in Population.

At the close of the World War Palestine was predominantly Moslem. When it became a British mandate in 1923 the Balfour declaration, favoring Palestine as a national home for the Jewish people, was put into effect. But for many years Jewish immigration was slow and emigration offset the inward flow of Jewish colonists. Even as late as 1931, with a population of about a million, Palestine had 760,000 Moslems to some 175,000 Jews and 91,000 Christians.

The troubles encountered by Jews in Germany, Poland and other countries in recent years sent a tide of immigrants to Palestine. In 1935 the number of Moslems had increased to 825,000, but the Jews, with 375,000, and Christians, with 100,000, were seriously threatening their age-old prerogatives. Of 65,000 recorded immigrants in 1935 more than 63,000 were Jews.

Jerusalem, the capital and historic center, is now second in population to Tel Aviv, an all-Jewish "boom town" of 135,000 populaiotn that did not exist in 1909. Tel Aviv adjoins the ancient city of Jaffa, or Joppa, former chief port of Jerusalem.

Essentially Agricultural.

Under Jewish leadership, and with the aid of foreign funds brought and sent into the country through its new arrivals, industrial development has proceeded at a rapid pace. Tel Aviv has more than 1,000 factories, large and small, and Haifa has opened up 400 such enterprises in recent years. Long lines of steel pylons, carrying electric current generated by the sacred River Jordan, now operate chemical works, cement plants, flour mills, oil and iron works, co-operative creameries, and other factories making products which once had to be imported in large quantities from abroad.

Palestine was, and still is, essentially an agricultural and pastoral country. Along the Mediterranean seacoast fruit orchards produce oranges, grapes, melons and olives for export. More than six and a half million cases of oranges were shipped to England and other parts of Europe in 1935. England has the lion's share of Palestine trade, both export and import. Second, oddly enough, is Germany. The United States sells more than it buys, ranking third in imports and sixth in exports.

In the great central plateau and Jordan river valley cereals and livestock are still the chief sources of income. In recent years both the government and private agencies have made extensive plantings of timber, fruit and shade trees. One of the new forests not far from Nazareth is named for the author of the Balfour declaration.

Palestine has many local problems that make it a difficult post for diplomats and foreign businessmen, even when times are quiet. There are three official languages—English, Arabic and Hebrew—and to get along easily one shoud also have a speaking knowledge of French and German. Palestine has its own currency based on the British pound. But the metric system—not used in most British areas—is followed by both government and local authorities, distances being measured in kilometers.

Palestine is also a difficult country for outsiders to understand when one considers that here, possibly more dramatically than anywhere else in the world, modern inventions, modern methods, and modern social ideas, are making dual changes. They are infusing a purely pastoral people with the ways and devices of an industrial civilization. And they are bringing back to pastoral environments a people renowned for their achievements in the world of science, literature and art.

First Defeat.

Captain Oliver Hazard Perry had three brigs, four schooners and one sloop with a total of 54 guns. Commodore Robert H. Barclay had six vessels, with 70 guns. The battle began at noon off Put-in-Bay, Ohio, with a long-range shot from the U. S. S. Scorpion, commanded by Stephen Champlain, 23. By 8 p. m., the first defeat of an English squadron in history had been accomplished and Perry was able to write Major General William Henry Harrison, commander in the Northwest Territory, an historic message:

"We have met the enemy and they are ours: Two ships, two brigs, one schooner and one sloop. Yours with great respect and esteem."

Outlawed Golf.

James IV of Scotland made golf illegal in Scotland and it was more than 100 years before the government rescinded his edict, which said: "It is statut and ordainit that in na place of the realme there be usit golfe or uther sik unprofitabill sports" on pain of imprisonment or fine.

His objection to golf and other sports was that it interfered with his subject's practice with the long bow, the weapon he wanted all to be proficient in using.

First Theater News.

The first theatrical news was published by an American newspaper—the Virginia Gazette. It announced current programs of the theater at Williamsburg, the first established in America. The attractions listed were "Tragedy of Cato," "The Busybody," "The Recruiting Officer" and "The Beaux Strategem."

This first theater also served as Williamsburg courthouse.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

BY PAUL MALLON.

HEADLINES WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—Hitler demands a colonial African empire from Britain and France in a bristling military speech at Nuremberg—Soviets stage troop maneuvers on white Russian frontier—France announces an umpteen million franc plan for military expansion over the next four years—Hull bluntly warns of war in speech to power congress—

These are the flashy developments within the span of two recent days. If they do not add up to a war just around the next corner, then a lot of people must be fooling.

The answer is: Ballyhoo.

Hitler was bragging to the annual Nazi party rally that he had accomplished all his objectives. He had been 100 per cent successful. A leader in Hitler's shoes without a purpose must either arrange for a pair of slippers or another purpose. The colonial empire demand will save him from going to the shoe store.

However, he will wear through many another pair before he gets any worth-while colonies out of France and Britain. They will stall him off with suggestions that he offer disarmament in return. The negotiations will drag on interminably. There will be no war about that. Both sides understand the game.

CHEST MANEUVERS Soviet troop maneuvers were likewise timed for the Nazi political convention, and for domestic political effect. It showed the Red peasant how alert his government is to the Nazi and other menaces, after having just survived a supposed Trotsky revolution. If Hitler can beat his chest without coughing, so can the Russians.

REPLENISHMENT The French have secret budgets for their military expendtiures. They announce what they choose. If it happens to be inaccurate, the world never knows the difference. This time, the French announcement neglected to say what they intended to use the new army appropriation for, purposely leaving the impression that a vast expansion of the army was planned.

The fact is her airplanes are obsolete. She was the first nation to have an efficient air force. She had over 3,000 planes the first of this year. But remarkable strides have been made in aviation lately. She will use most of her new francs to keep up with the Germans.

No war will come of that.

WARNING There is no reason to believe Mr. Hull had any private information leading him to suspect war is nearer than the public generally suspects. He did not profess to have any. If he has, he is keeping something from most of his advisers. His speech was intended only as a warning.

And, incidentally, many a New Deal politico considers the possibility of war within the next four years is another reason why President Roosevelt should be elected.

No war will come of this warning, no peace either. Some votes may.

BEST GUESS The authorities here who know as much about war prospects as anyone else have not recently changed their size-up of the situation.

They think the odds are 10 to 1 against war in the next year, but only about 2 to 1 against an outbreak in 1938. There is also a fair chance that the international disarmament movement will be revived before then and some agreement reached which will delay war even further. Most of the nations are getting what they want, and will have to ease up on expenditures or fight.

Their hunch is that the spot where war is most likely to break is not the one upon which the eyes of the world now are focused, but on the far eastern frontier, where Russia and Japan are glaring at each other.

ONE-WAY FOG The Navy and State Departments are becoming more and more involved in their "mistaken identity" theory of the bombing of the Kane. The seriousness of the incident is over, but not the discomfiture of the officials. Their first story sounded a little weak, but now it is near exhaustion.

The original official interpretation was that the plane was low enough to disclose that it was a three-motored ship, but too far up to see the American flags on the destroyer, also too high to be hit by three rounds of anti-aircraft ammunition.

Now it develops the plane was low enough and visibility was clear enough to enable a naval officer on the destroyer to take a movie of the whole bombing with his personal hand camera. The Navy Department has called for the films.

When these come, they will undoubtedly establish the existence of a sea phenomenon, a one-way fog at the scene of conflict.

SILHOUETTES

BY RALPH T. JONES.

You can fret, you can fume,
You can groan as you will,
Each day that rolls 'round
There's a column to fill.

A Blonde In a Blue Car.

Awf'ly attractive blonde in a new blue car drove out of Lakeshore drive onto Ponce de Leon avenue yesterday morning. I was coming to town and scraped 100 miles of rubber off my tires in jamming on the brakes to avoid hitting her.

Then we passed and repassed each other all the way to town. Finally lost her in the vicinity of the state capitol. She is not the best driver in the world and should learn to look both ways before turning into a main traffic artery from a side road.

But she looked so alluring in that smart little blue car I was quite ready to forgive and forget and, before reaching town, had begun to hope she used the same parking lot.

No fruition for hopes, though. As said, I lost her and one more blonde has detoured out of my pathway of life.

Queer Contacts.

Strange contacts in a newspaper office. Sitting facing me as this is written is Mozelle Horton Young, busy on her Music Notes column for The Sunday Constitution, and with a copy of "Musical America" at her elbow. Near that magazine is "Dog News," with a picture of a gloriously handsome English bull on the front cover.

Mozelle's chairback is rubbing against that of the Financial Editor who is compiling the day's report on prices of hogs for the market page. And talking to Ralph McGill in the sports department, a few feet away, is a well known and massive professional wrestler.

A group at the copy desk is once again recounting experiences of Wednesday, the day of voting triumphs and disappointments and the managing editor, close by, is looking over a batch of photographs of news events from all over the world.

And the reporter at my left elbow using the telephone is taking details on injuries in an automobile wreck of the day.

Here comes a visitor from the advertising department. Probably wants something. They say the fellows downstairs who sell the space to advertisers make bigger salaries than we do, who compile the news that creates the paper each day. Maybe. But look at the associations.

Faulty, But Interesting.

Better posted students of American history than I have reported that the screen story of the days of Andrew Jackson, "The Gorgeous Hussy," is at serious variance with the historical record of the individuals in the plot.

Even so it makes a fascinating picture as is and reveals quite a lot about the national issues, habits and customs of that past era.

I wonder, though, whether it is wise to alter historical facts to fit the exigencies of a picture, play or book story? The younger generation, having seen a certain character do so and so on the screen, is apt, forever after, to believe they did so and so in real life, whereas history shows they did entirely differently.

The story of Cleopatra and Antony, according to Shakespeare, is at variance with history on important points, but today 999 out of 1,000 accept the Shakespearian version as exact truth.

It would be a pity for Americans of the future to accept screen fiction for truth and for the real historical record to live only in the musty minds and libraries of professors and antiquarians.

Is History Truthful?

Of course, as a matter of fact, most historical records, even those accepted as literal fact, are distorted. National pride and the hunger for drama and romance have twisted happenings of the past to fit the desires of the speaker or the writer. And, aside from a few dates and names and other essentially unimportant data, our history itself is composed largely of fiction and fantasy.

No one today knows, absolutely, what were the underlying causes and the reactions of the people to the wars and revolutions of the distant past. No one today can understand the popular attitude towards human customs and habits that have changed through the centuries. We, perforce, interpret conditions in the light of popular opinion today and, therefore, praise what to the protagonists may have been infamous and condemn acts that may have been laudable.

And few national histories record, honestly, the story of the battles or other events where their own nation has been the loser. Nor with proper restraint those they have won. Bias is found on every page of history as it is written.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

From The Constitution of Tuesday, September 12, 1911:

"A pretty little woman, dressed in a striking costume and with a big picture hat and flowing black plumes, was taken to the police station yesterday evening, followed by four barrels containing approximately 500 half-pints of whisky. She was charged with keeping liquor on hand for the purpose of sale."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From The Constitution of Sunday, September 12, 1886:

"New York, September 11.—Today's race has decided upon which side of the Atlantic the American cup shall stay, for at least another year. It resulted in a glorious victory for the Boston sloop, Mayflower, over the English contender, Galatea."

Barbara Didn't Do It.

Mrs. Barbara Hauer Frietchie, 96, became historic for something she didn't do. That morning, in the same street in Frederick, Md., in which Widow Frietchie lived, a United States flag or some other Uunion symbol was displayed by a Mrs. Mary Quantrell, and tradition states that a Confederate soldier attempted to take it away from her, contrary to strict orders. In the telling the incident was magnified out of all proportion to fact, and Mrs. Quantrell was confused with Dame Frietchie. Stonewall wasn't there to utter the classic sentiments put in his mouth later by John Greenleaf Whittier.

FAIR ENOUGH

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Spelvin Thought. NEW YORK, Sept. 11. Driving to the office this morning, George Spelvin, American, thought as follows:

Have to cut that out. No sense to it. Must have had a dozen scotches but those brandies in between. Man's an awful fool to do that. Well, I'm through, that's all there is to that. Glad it's never got a grip on me like some guys. Quit any time; never miss it. Quit dozens of times. Not another drop for six months anyway. Maybe a year. Christmas be tough though. Everybody wanting guy to drink Christmas. Hell with them. It's my health. Ruin it for nobody. Oo-oo-oo! Why did I tell that one at dinner? Look at that creeper poking along in the middle of the road. Get over, get over dope. Costs about $100,000 a mile to build these roads and some dope creeps along so nobody can use them. Oughta pinch a few. Woman driver, of course. Probably a battle-axe. Um-m, nice. How do you do? Sneak another look in the mirror. Certainly nice. Oh well, none of my business. Keep going, say or you'll be late for work. Look at that truck tear. Must be 20 tons. Using regular box-cars on the roads now. Crash right along without regard for anybody. Know my rights, though. Better not smash me. Sue for a million.

Gentlemen Of the Jury. Gentlemen of the jury, I was driving to work in the morning, doing about 35—no, doing about 22 miles—driving cautiously, perfectly alert, perfectly sober, in fact don't drink. Quit drinking, but don't object other people drinking, gentlemen of the jury. This enormous juggernaut, tearing along 45 miles an hour, way over wrong side of the road, struck me head on. No witnesses, though. What am I going to use for witnesses? Truck chauffeur and helper be sure to claim I hit them. Anyway, their insurance company probably drag me clear up to United States Supreme Court. Lucky to get hospital expenses in the end, after paying lawyers, court expenses and all. Poor guy no chance against corporation lawyers in courts. Dirty crooks and they talk about ethics of the bar and sanctity of law. Lawyers fix it so rich millionaires don't pay income taxes but I got to pay $86 and then they come after you two years later for $12 more, with six per cent interest. Show me where I can get six per cent interest on my savings. A racket. Four hundred dollars exemption for a kid. Try keeping a kid on $400 a year. No exemption for doctor bills, either. Rich corporations charge off depreciation but no allowance for depreciation of your health.

Health Is Equipment. Your health is your equipment just like factory machinery. Motorcycle cop. Go on, you goggle-eyed punk and pick up some of these creepers and truck drivers. Let sober, alert, cautious drivers alone. Give me a ticket and I'd demand jury trial. I'd say, your honor this officer is a liar, committing perjury. Demand jury trial. I'm a respectable taxpayer. Moreover, wasn't intoxicated, either. It happens I don't drink. My word against his and I know my rights. Convict me and I'll fight it to the highest court in the land. Spend a thousand dollars fighting rather than pay ten dollars fine on cop's testimony. Matter of principle. Need a dictator around here a few months. Clean up the police and courts, crooked politicians, racketeers. Dictators not so hot if you don't like the guy, though. Some enemy squeals you said the dictator was just a crook and bang-bang against a wall. Oh chop your head off with an axe. Those cock-eyed, crazy Dutchmen. Heil Hitler. Heel Hitler more like it. Ninety-nine per cent vote for Heel Hitler but strictly one-way ballot. No way to vote no. Chop your head off if you try. No wonder he got 99 per cent. Other per cent dead or in the can. How can those crazy Dutchmen kid themselves that's an election? Just nuts. Gimme the American way.

Gee, getting late. Step on it, brother, or you'll be late. Let him try to bawl me out. I'll tell him. Forgets the nights I've worked overtime. I'll say, "Does it ever enter your so-called intelligence Mr. Nilly, that I do two men's work around here and no raise in three years?" I'll tell him plenty.

Just under the wire. 'Morning Mr. Nilly.

Discovery By Accident.

Luigi (Louis) Galvani was born at Bologna, Italy. He was in his 50s when he made one of the greatest scientific discoveries by accident. In skinning frog's legs for a broth for his sick wife, held the legs with a metal clamp while cutting the skin with a scalpel. The clamp and scalpel happened to touch, and to Galvani's amazement, the frog's leg twitched. Further investigation showed that the leg with its attached nerve formed a delicate indicator of the presence of electricity. He had discovered animal electricity, laid the foundation of electrophysiology and anticipated the invention of the electric cell (by Volta).

Cabinet Strike.

President John Tyler's cabinet once went on strike! Every member except one—Daniel Webster, secretary of state—sent his a letter of resignation in protest against a bill providing for a federal bank which he favored. Webster didn't offer to resign because there was no vice president and he was in line for the presidency.

The resignations didn't induce Tyler to yield. He accepted them and named a new cabinet. But the bill wasn't enacted.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Red-Headed Daughter

BY ROBERT QUILLEN.

My Dear Louise:

Some years ago I knew a lad of 18 who frequently referred to himself as a man but had little acquaintance with the qualities that constitute manliness.

When he went away to school, his widowed old mother, who was poor in both health and goods, spent a day in the kitchen baking his favorite pies and a layer cake.

She was an impractical and unworldly old lady, with only the vaguest idea of the way mail is handled, and when her love offering reached the boy it was sadly scrambled.

A manly boy of 18 would have written a letter of thanks and praise to repay his mother's devotion and make her heart glad, but this kid was a spoiled baby.

He wrote a reproachful letter, carefully describing the mess he had received, and lost his soul by adding: "You should have had more sense than to mail it in a cardboard box."

Two years later he spent his summer vacation outdoors with an older man who said of him: "He is the most completely selfish kid I ever knew."

Well, the lad got married to a nice girl, and today I heard her make a statement that reminded me of the other situation.

They live some 20 miles from his mother, and the old lady feels hurt because they seldom visit her. And this is the statement, made in a tone of voice that revealed many a personal grievance: "In the two years we have been married, I have never once heard Bill say: 'Let's drive over and see mother.'"

If you wonder why I tell you this, take a closer look at the handsome youngster who is beginning to show an interest in you.

Will Durant defines a gentleman as one who is "continually considerate of all." That covers the ground pretty well. And a youngster who is completely selfish can't have many of the attributes of a gentleman.

There is always danger of falling in love with a boy you go with, and then you won't be able to see any of his faults. Girls as smart as you have given their hearts to rotters.

That is all, except heaven help and pity the girl who marries a man with a juvenile mind who is incapable of self-sacrifice and unselfishness.

Hollywood Today

By SHEILAH GRAHAM.

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 11.—Nineteen-year-old Olivia De Havilland has been assigned a new screen lover—Robert Montgomery—for her next picture, "The Marriage Clause." The partnership is welcome to both players. With the exemption of Fredric March in "Anthony Adverse," the brunette actress has done most of her movie love-making with Errol Flynn—in "Captain Blood" and "The Charge of the Light Brigade"—and has had little chance to enjoy the lighter love flippancies she will get from Montgomery. The move to Warners will be in the nature of a holiday for the debonair Bob, who has been quarreling with M.-G.-M., his home studio, for months past because of what he considers bad picture material assigned him.

The story of "The Marriage Clause" is based on the United States regulation which forbids both husband and wife to work for the government. Production has been delayed until early next month to enable Miss De Havilland to recover completely from bronchitis, contracted as a result of standing too long in cold water for scenes in "The Charge of the Light Brigade."

Victor McLaglen has been borrowed from Twentieth Century-Fox by R. K. O.-Radio to play the husky hero in "Coast Guard," original story by Lieutenant Commander Frank Wead, exploiting an important branch of federal service hitherto neglected by the screen. McLaglen has the good luck to be supported by Barbara Stanwyck, whose screen rating at the moment is deservedly high and who can always be relied upon to turn in a fine piece of acting. Jack Oakie will act as light relief to McLaglen, although his role will be slightly more serious than those of recent pictures and will give him the opportunity he wants of proving he can act as well as clown.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is the latest picture dictator. Ever since she unpacked her personal belongings in the White House, the first lady of the land has concerned herself with the troubles of sharecroppers of the south. Jack Warner is furthering Mrs. Roosevelt's interests in concrete fashion by making the picture, "Lords of the Land," based on conditions of southern tenant farming. Another flicker being made following the recommendation of the President's wife is "Gone With the Wind," best selling novel from which David O. Selznick has just paid the author $52,000.

"Lords of the Land," written by Anthony Coldeway, will give Jean Muir her biggest opportunity since she scored in "As the Earth Turns," a similar epic on farm struggle for prosperity. Supporting members of the cast include Bayton MacLane and Robert Barrat.

Jean Arthur has been assigned the leading role in Paramount's "Easy Living," story of a girl whose life is changed through ownership of a fur coat. Among other mishaps, Jean nearly starves to death in order to retain possession of her treasure. Production on the film is perforce delayed until January, as Miss Arthur's roster of pictures—the result of her fine acting with Gary Cooper in "Mr. Deeds"—is almost too heavy a load for one actress to carry. Jean has promised to make three pictures for R. K. O.-Radio, one or two for Columbia, and, in addition, her contract calls for three for Paramount. Right now, the actress is finishing up her "Calamity Jane" role in Cecil B. DeMille's mammoth production, "The Plainsmen."

HEALTH TALKS

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

Of course if some one dropped you on the floor and injured your head when you were a baby you can't help it now, but you can at least try to behave intelligently when you visit the doctor. On the way to his office you might think over your complaint, get it in hand and be ready to tell him what it is when he asks you.

I don't mean to suggest that you spring a snappy answer. Doctors nowadays do not lay themselves open to that. They do not ask you what your trouble is or what seems to be the matter with you today. They ask you what you complain of. You had better expect that, so you won't get rattled and flounder about and mutter that you're sure you don't know. That is exasperating to an earnest, busy physician.

Whatever your complaint may be—don't deny that you have a chief complaint, the thing that causes you to seek medical advice—you surely know whether it has just developed this morning or whether you have noticed it for two or three weeks or for the past six years. Make up your mind about the duration of the trouble and don't try to fend off the doctor's queries by answering that it has been bothering you for quite a while.

And for heaven's sake forget the remedies or treatments you have already tried and the imposing sums you have squandered on them. Forget also the patent incompetence of the other doctors you have already consulted. If your present doctor is any good at all he won't care and he won't listen to such remarks. Confine your chatter to your present complaint and try to answer any questions intelligently. Then hold your breath, or breathe in or breathe out or try ah or ninety-nine as the doctor may request.

If you are serious about it, go prepared to strip for examination. If you are a woman, and the doctor has no nurse in his office, take along a relative or friend.

Leave at home your own notions as to the nature or proper management of your trouble. Tell the doctor your symptoms, not what you think they signify. It is his job to interpret symptoms or signs he elicits by examination. However, if you feel on an even footing with the doctor or if you think you know as much as he does about your particular trouble, you having had so much experience with it, better save the fee. Wait till you find a doctor who knows more than you do.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Bursitis.

What precautions to prevent necessity for operation for bursitis of knee when inflammation has subsided? Is any diathermy method useful? (W. A. W.)

Answer—Daily applications of diathermy might promote complete recovery. If the bursitis was acute, not of prolonged duration, the knee should be kept functionally at rest for a week or more—by means of suitable splint and crutch or cane.

Deafmutism.

Grandmother bore seven children. Two, (boy and girl) were born deaf mutes; the rest are normal. The girl, my aunt, married a deaf mute; they had three children, all deaf and dumb. . . . The boy, my uncle, married a normal woman from a normal family and has a son who is normal. My cousin and I are afraid to have children. (D. H.)

Answer—Any offspring of yours or your cousins would be not unlikely to be deaf and dumb. You should not marry.

Wife-Slaying Ironmaker Kills Self After 4 Tries

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 11.—(UP)—Peter Antol, 34-year-old ironmaker, impatiently used four different means of committing suicide to kill himself today.

He apparently became temporarily crazed after a quarrel with his wife. He hit her with an iron pipe, fracturing her skull.

Then he tried to drown himself in the bathtub. This didn't work.

Next, Antol made a noose from one of his wife's dresses and tried to hang himself from a lighting fixture. The dress broke and he fell to the floor still alive.

He then swallowed a bottle of poison. This was too slow.

He rushed into the kitchen, stuck his head in the gas stove oven and turned on the jets.

Neighbors found him there and rushed him to a hospital, where he died.

The three Antol children slept peacefully through it all.

ATLANTA THEATER NEWS

Noted Stars at Fox In 'The Road to Glory'

A vivid war-time story, "The Road to Glory," was unreeled for the first time in Atlanta yesterday on the screen of the Fox theater in the start of a week's engagement.

With a cast headed by Frederic March, Warner Baxter, Lionel Barrymore, June Lang and Gregory Ratoff, the film tells an absorbing story of love against a background of war's realities.

March, Baxter and Barrymore, as usual, turn in splendid performances, but special bows should go to Ratoff, as the hard-boiled sergeant, and Miss Lang, as the lovely nurse. Their performances add considerably to the film's worth.

Ratoff displays histrionic ability of a high order, and Miss Lang speaks her lines effectively. In appearance, she is remindful of Loretta Young while Ratoff brings to mind Wallace Beery.

The story tells of the exploits of a French regiment, fighters all, but lovable human beings. Baxter is seen as a war-weary captain, weighted down with the futility and responsibility of his command.

He falls in love with Miss Lang, and this gives him his only interest in life. March meets the girl, not knowing she is the "heart" of his commanding officer. She falls in love with him.

The denouement comes during a big drive in which both men are wounded. Added interest is contained in Barrymore's joining the colors, to serve under his son, Baxter. Their moments together are high spots of the film.

The war scenes are authentic and compelling. Howard Hawks' direction is more than capable, and the photography is excellent.

Vincent Lopez and his band in a musical short and a newsreel complete the bill. L. F.

New Paramount Film Opens Week's Showing

Francis Lederer, the headliner, and Fred Stone, of the supporting cast, vie for acting honors in Paramount's version of that upside-down picture of society, "My American Wife," this week's attraction at the Paramount theater.

From the beginning to the end "My American Wife" is a direct contradiction to the usual mental conception of American society life, in which the European titled-prince seeks an American heiress for her money. In this interpretation of the social scene, we find an honest, deserving young European count marrying a pretty Arizona heiress for love and love alone—a fact that the bride and her mother cannot seem to get through their society-prestige-mad heads. The count is Lederer, his bride is Ann Sothern, and the mother-in-law is Billie Burke.

Fred Stone plays the part of the down-to-earth old Arizona rancher who made the money that the family is spending. From the sound of things he makes up his mind ahead of time to hate the dashing young fortune seeking European and drive him back to the homeland even if it does cost him a few of his millions. But, to his utter surprise, he finds the young man much to his liking and not a money-mad addition to his family. Stone and Lederer become fast friends, chewing, drinking and plotting together.

The mother-in-law, the daughter and the father-in-law seek to cash in on the count. One for social reasons, one for jealousy and the latter for business reasons. But the count fools them all. He wants to be a real American, and when the bride's family refuse to let him, he walks out. Of course, Stone cheers and succeeds in redeeming his granddaughter and bringing the two lovers "back together again."

Miss Burke acted the part of the socially-struck matron well, and Miss Sothern, with all her beauty, added a great amount to the love plot. But to Lederer and Stone must go the laurels in "My American Wife."

The March of Time, picturing the Passamaquoddy power enterprise, and other scenes, a cartoon and news reel round out a very good program. L. R.

'Kuddling Kuties' Open Week's Stay at Atlanta

Audience response last night at the Atlanta theater indicated the new burlesque company, the "Kuddling Kuties," has very close to just what burlesque patrons like best in the way of entertainment. There was applause and laughter and encoring sufficient to satisfy the most cheer-hungry of performers.

The line of girls in the new company is a considerable improvement, both in dancing ability and pulchritude, upon that of their predecessors on the local boards, while the comedy purveyors actually offered many gags that were either brand-new or presented in a manner to appear new. Which, after all, is the desideratum of comedy.

Star performer, according to billing, is Joan Tenya, who does a provocative strip act or two that are sufficiently different from the run-of-mine strip-teasers to warrant special commendation. There is a redhead named Fanny McAvoy and a brunette named Bobbie Young who are almost as good.

Then the dance team of Renee and Adair is really high class in fast terpsichore, while Boo Blake, Sam Mitchell and other funny men keep plenty of laughs coming all the time they are on stage. The act with a comedian in the box is about the funniest.

One scene, last night, was somewhat too long drawn, tending to slow the otherwise fast tempo of the show, but it was promised this would be remedied by today's matinee.

There are numerous spectacular stage arrangements, with plenty of use made of the good-looking female forms in the organization for decorative purposes. Also some fast ensemble dances and some singing by Eddy Butler that is much above what Atlanta has heard in the past from burlesque vocalists.

"Kuddling Kuties" is the first truly "road show" burlesque Atlanta has seen and it holds good promise for the future policy at the Atlanta theater.

The company will be here one week, with two shows daily and a special Saturday midnight matinee. A new company comes in for next Friday night's opening. This one is well worth seeing if you ever are a patron of burlesque. S. C.

'Devil's Squadron' Flies To Rialto for Week

"Devil's Squadron," which hit the Rialto theater screen yesterday with an open throttle, gave the first day audience an hour and so many minutes of breathless thrills, a romance with a punch and painted a picture of the lives of unsung heroes who die so that you and you may fly safely from Atlanta to some distant point in the country in a few minutes less time.

The "Devil's Squadron" is not a bunch of war-time flyers who fight to kill. But it is a group of picked, intelligent pilots—test pilots—who take up an untried ship, a new model, and put it through suicidal antics to see if it is safe for commercial or government use. Often there is some unseen defect in the ship. It cracks up, sometimes at the end of a power dive, when the plane is doing better than 500 miles an hour.

And another test pilot, another member of the devil's squadron, is dead.

That bit of aeronautical business, that fight the test pilots put up to save lives in the future, forms a dramatic background for the Rialto theater's presentation this week. Karen Morley is the daughter of an airplane manufacturer. She meets Richard Dix on a plane en route to the test field. She explains to him during the trip just what a hazardous life a test pilot leads.

When her father introduces her later to the new test pilot—Richard Dix—something begins in the way of romance. But she is engaged to Lloyd Nolan, chief engineer of her father's plant. She lives and breathes airplanes until test flights begin on the speedy new model her father is constructing until one after another of the lovable, happy-go-lucky test pilots is killed trying out models.

First her father, on an experimental flight, then "Tex," the westerner who risked his life and died because he wanted money to buy a ranch, then her brother commits suicide because he realizes he is afraid to take the job—on down the line they go, each incident packed with all the thrills of a dozen war-time dog fights.

Dix is discharged from the company when he pulls a trick to save the girl's face and feelings after her brother commits suicide. He vindicates himself in a smashing climax that puts a peak on all the thrills of the story.

Plenty comedy is interspersed with all thrills and drama by Shirley Ross, Billy Burrud and other favorite laugh-producers.

Bitsy Grant Bows to Fred Perry in Bitter Four-Set Match

BREAK O'DAY!
By Ralph McGill

Bitsy Grant was the story yesterday.

I stood by the machines watching the cold metal type out one of the warmest stories of the year.

Fred Perry, the debonair and unruffled Englishman, had a very bad afternoon. He was meeting the charge of an aroused competitor.

The report said that the Englishman took a header and slid on his nose as he tried to halt the Grant rush in the third set. He came off with grass stains on his flannels and was quite mussed up—for the first time in his career.

Grant reminds me always of that verse by the late Mr. Kipling, describing the Soudan natives and their attack on a British square—which they broke. Mr. Kipling wrote, for the British soldier, as follows:

> 'E rushes at the smoke when we let drive,
> An' before we know, 'e's 'ackin' at our head;
> 'Es's all 'ot sand and ginger when alive,
> An' 'e's generally shammin' when 'e's dead.
> 'E's a daisy, 'e's a ducky, 'e's a lamb!
> 'E's a injia-rubber idiot on the spree,
> 'E's the only thing that doesn't care a damn
> For the regiment o' British infantree.

Our Mr. Grant plays tennis with that same spirit. Certainly he is a lot o' sand and ginger and he rushes at the smoke of combat.

He broke Perry's service yesterday and he took the second set. The Englishman won 6-4, 3-6, 7-5, 6-2, but it was great tennis. No one else has played him off his feet—literally. We expect Bitsy Grant to come off the courts covered with dirt and dust and with the knees torn out of his trousers.

But yesterday, the story said, they both looked like members of the St. Louis Cardinals' Gas House Gang—famed in baseball circles for their dowdy, soil-stained uniforms.

The greatest tennis player in the world had a difficult time of it.

And it is just barely possible that Fred Perry left the championship there on the courts today. Grant may have taken enough out of him for Donald Budge, the Californian, to come along and win today.

"PIT-PAT" TENNIS.

Vincent Richards advances the theory the American tennis players are playing "pit-pat" tennis.

It is his contention the young players of today, following the coaching style of Mercer Beasley, play a defensive game—one which looks toward winning on the other man's errors rather than playing a hard-hitting offensive game and winning by superior attack.

This seems entirely logical. Certainly our players have failed utterly to meet the smashing, offensive tactics of the English and Australians.

TENNIS PROFESSIONALS NEEDED.

There isn't much doubt but that the concentration of athletic interest on football in our American colleges has been largely responsible for the decline of college baseball.

Football is the dominant power and football players are not, except in rare instances, encouraged to participate in other sports, except, perhaps, basketball.

It would be a very progressive move for the colleges to hire tennis coaches for their students. Tennis is a game which can be played after one leaves college. It can be played by a large number of students. It is a better college sport than baseball for that reason.

Football must continue to pay the bills. And tennis might well be one of the bills to pay. But it is inescapable that if capable tennis coaches were engaged by universities and some of the unused space turned into tennis courts, that within a few years intercollegiate tennis would be paying its own way.

VAUNTED VOLS DROP 2 GAMES TO LITTLE ROCK

Wetherell Blanks Lookouts; Smokies Club Pels For 10-to-3 Win.

By the Associated Press.

Little Rock handed Nashville a double trimming last nigt, nosing them out, 3 to 2, in the first game and taking a 5-to-0 as nightcap.

Bill Andrus and Jimmy Crawford were the big guns in the Little Rock attack. Andrus blasted two Nashville pitchers for a a triple, two doubles and a single in the first game. Crawford, at bat three times in the second, got a single, triple and home run.

Ray Moss hurled the Knoxville Smokies to a 10-to-3 victory over the New Orleans Pelicans last night at New Orleans.

The Smokies' attack was wide open in the sixth, ending only after seven runs crossed the plate. The only bright feature for the Pels was the stickwork of Tom Henrich, who got three hits, one double, in four times at bat.

Russwood park saw its third shutout of the season last night when the Memphis Chicks took a 2-to-0 game from the Chattanooga Lookouts.

Right-handed Dell Wetherell was in fine form for the Chicks, allowing only five hits. The Memphis batsmen rapped the Lookout hurlers for 14 safeties. Three double plays by the Engelmen failed to save the day.

MAULDIN TAKES WRESTLING TITLE

A large crowd saw the southern light-heavyweight wrestling championship change hands last night at the Riverside arena when Gentleman John Mauldin upset the dope to win from Honey Boy Hackney in a hectic bout that had the fans excited all the way.

Hackney started off in fine style. He took the first fall in 18 minutes with a hook scissors and seemed headed for victory. But Mauldin got rough and started punching.

"Gentleman John" proceeded to win the second fall in 14 minutes, using his fists to advantage. He tossed Hackney out of the ring three times, and the latter was unable to return for the final fall. Referee Red Carlton thereupon awarded the match and championship belt to Mauldin.

Tiger Long Matched With Honey Hackney

Tiger Long, one of the best light heavyweights who has appeared here in a long time has been matched with Honey Boy Hackney, the New Jersey star, and recently deposed southern lightweight champion, in the main bout at the Key arena Monday night.

Long made a great impression with the fans in his first few appearances here. He is a clean, scientific wrestler, and very skilful. One of the best matches of the season is in prospect.

Etter Hurls No-Hitter In Softball Tourney

Behind the no-hit hurling of Pitcher Etter, the fast-stepping Newton Chevrolet team, of Chattanooga, Tenn., last night defeated the Piedmont Plush Mill team, of Greenville, S. C., 10 to 1, in the Mid-South Amateur soft ball tournament.

Etter struck out 13 and walked one. The score came as a result of a walk and an error by the third baseman.

Here and There In Sports

By Eddie Brietz.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Well the Yanks are "in"—and that's exactly one-half of a subway World Series. . . . Joe Cronin (who knows from 1933) says if Hubbell and Schumacher are right, the Yanks are in for a tough time if the two teams meet. . . . On his last few times out, Schumacher appeared too fast for his own good. . . . Begins to look as if those who bet Joe DiMaggio would not hit .350 in his freshman year will cash in. . . . Shanty Hogan, the elephantine catcher, is already a tremendous favorite with Washington fans. . . . What is the idea behind the big Red Sox shift? . . . Clarence Phillips, six-foot right-hander of the Tigers, is a dead ringer (in the face, of course) of the Walter Johnson of 20 years ago.

There was a lot of good-natured ribbing in the All-Star game. . . . "Is this thing on the level?" one guy hollered as the Giants scored a touchdown. . . . Another quipped that apparently Bernie Bierman's famous system doesn't work east of the Mississippi. . . . Two minutes after he went into the game, Dick Heekin, Ohio State back, was the unanimous cherce of the pippul. . . . The All-Star coaches gave their lads a powerful pep talk, but all Steve Owens had to do was give a few joyful rings on the Giant cash register. . . . The fans caught the spirit of the thing and departed without tearing down the goal posts.

BARONS CAPTURE THIRD STRAIGHT FROM CRACKERS

Score Is 7-2; George Darrow Will Face Al Williams Tonight.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 11.—The Barons made it three in a row over the Crackers here Friday night and made it a full game harder for the Pelicans to overtake them in third place by handing the Crackers a 7-2 defeat, while New Orleans was losing.

Earl Overman, a husky right-hander, steadied down after allowing two runs in the first inning to hold the Crackers scoreless the rest of the game. The Barons meanwhile jumped on Bob Durham for six runs in the fourth and one in the fifth for their margin of victory. Birmingham made 14 hits all told off Durham and Ralph West. Overman scattered nine hits.

George Darrow, who has won 21 games for the Barons, will start for the Barons in Saturday night's game, facing Al Williams. Darrow will not rest up for the Shaugnessy playoff because if the Barons play Nashville, which now seems a certainty, he will not hurl at Sulphur Dell, due to the fact he has been knocked from the box twice there this year.

HAMEL SINGLES.

Peck Hamel led off in the first with a single just over Sanford's reach. He was forced, but Hooks walked. After Lipscomb grounded out, Galvin scored Browne with a single back of second, and Hooks scored on a duplicate hit by Chatham.

The first Baron up in both the first and second innings singled, but did not score. Hooks got the fourth hit off Overman in the third, but a double play nipped him.

The Crackers missed another scoring chance in the fourth when Hutcheson singled after two were out. Hill doubled to deep right and both runners underestimated LeGrant Scott's throwing ability. Scott's peg home enabled the Barons to catch Hutcheson in a chase off third and he was out.

The Barons went on a spree in their half of the fourth when they made six runs off as many hits, including four straight hits, one a triple by LeGrant Scott. A great catch by Peck Hamel prevented further scoring.

ANOTHER FOR BARONS.

Sueme's double, his third hit of the game, and Luce's triple to right gave the Barons another run in the fifth. Lipscomb walked as first up for the Crackers in the sixth but didn't score.

Durham went out for a pinchhitter, Emil Mailho, in the seventh, to no avail, despite Hamel's single. Ralph West went to the mound for the second time in two nights to face the Barons in the seventh and he filled the bases by walking Sueme and Luce after two were out and after James had doubled, but Trapp grounded out.

West pulled out of another hole in the eighth after Woodard had beat out a hit to fill the bases when he caused Scott to foul out and James to fly to right.

Hutcheson got his second hit after one was away in the ninth. He went to second on a wild pitch and to third on Hill's infield out, only to stay there when West struck out.

ONLY FRED HAAS SOLVES COURSE

By Scotty Reston.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

GARDEN CITY, N. Y., Sept. 11.—(AP)—The competitors in the national amateur golf championship which starts here Monday had their first battle with Garden City's wind today, and the scores on the famed course began soaring.

Only Freddie Haas, New Orleans, the Canadian amateur champion, managed to break par. The lean, handsome southerner went out in the morning before the wind had risen and reported at 72, one under par, but most of the others had their troubles.

Bud Ward, of Tacoma, Wash., scored two 73's and Jack Munger, Dallas, playing with two cut fingers also managed to score a 73. Chick Evans, Chicago, who holds the present competitive record of 71, arrived today and toured the course in 74. As did Jesse Guilford, Boston, the 1921 champion, and Jack McLean, the former Scottish amateur champion.

Francis Ouimet, Brookline, Mass., and Johnny Fischer, Cincinnati, arrived at the course for the first time today, but both played only a few holes. Most of the players in the field were on hand today and the course and practice fairway were crowded.

After one trip around the course, many of the players took to the practice course and practiced hitting iron shots that would die as soon as they landed. The hard, fast greens are causing most of the players a great deal of trouble.

Tournament officials said tonight that the greens would be cut down fast when the 82 matches get under way in the first round Monday. No changes will be made in the tee markers except at the short holes all week.

THE SPORTLIGHT by GRANTLAND RICE

ENGLAND VS. CALIFORNIA.

(Copyright, 1936, by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 11.—Bitsy Grant, the bounding boomerang from Georgia, mopped up most of the turf and clay at Forest Hills. Bitsy dived and skidded, spun asd slipped, ran and leaped. He introduced the single and double pivot, the spinner and the triple reverse as his white uniform turned grass green and clay brown.

But his gallant galloping was all in vain against the stronger all-around game of Fred Perry, who won out in four sets to move against Don Budge, of California, in the final match for the tennis championship of the United States. The California red-head had no trouble stopping Frank Parker in straight sets to get his shot at the black-haired Englishman, who won here in 1933 and 1934 and is picked to repeat on form.

The tennis final here is all England and California. As Perry and Budge moved into the last pit of the front line, Helen Jacobs, of California, eliminated Kay Stammers, of England, in what proved to be the best match of the day and one of the best women's matches ever played, no matter what spot you name.

Grant's Circus Act.

It was the match between Miss Jacobs and Miss Stammers that caught the fancy of the expert witnesses, but it was the rubber-ball returns of Bitsy Grant that held the admiration of the 8,000 spectators, who saw the astonishing Georgian put on another circus act in keeping the ball in play so long, even against the greatest amateur in the world.

Perry apparently didn't take the match too seriously in the early stages, as he attempted to match Grant at the latter's exhibition on the flying trapeze. But, after losing the second set and then being badly crowded in the third at 5-all, Perry finally settled down to the job with something more than even Grant could handle on defense.

There were any number of times when Perry's face wore a startled and bewildered look as Grant kept popping the ball back from almost impossible places. He must have felt as if he were rapping the ball against a brick wall, as drives to one corner of the court and then another corner found Bitsy's racquet in the road, pumping the ball back. But when the showdown came, Perry had entirely too many guns. When he became crowded, he had more pace than even Grant's twinkling feet could handle.

POLO TILT SET AT M'PHERSON

The Fort McPherson and Governors' Horse Guard polo teams are taking advantage of the first fall weather to resume their rivalry of many years' standing. The inaugural game of the season will be played at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon at Fort McPherson.

Due to the constant change in officer personnel at the fort, the McPherson team is composed almost entirely of newcomers. But none of the players are new at the game. The army team boasts as captain, Major Jim Short, who for years has been rated a three-goal man. He will play his polo pony, Italio, one of the best ponies in the game. Colonel Billy Wyche, one of the team's mainstays last year, will play again in the No. 3 position. Lieutenant Dave Hedekin, who made such a brilliant showing in the Atlanta horse show, will be No. 1 man for the fort team. Captain Corrigan and Captain Garver will play for McPherson for the first time Sunday.

Wesley Moran will again captain the Governor's Horse Guard team. His playing on the gray, Lena, has never failed to be spectacular. Gerald Graham has returned from the riding school at Fort Riley to play an even more expert game of polo. Bill Smith, though suffering the loss of his fine pony, Whaley, will resume his post as No. 1 man for the Guards and is expected to score several goals for his team.

The hard practice that this team has put into games at Fort Oglethorpe and Piedmont Park this summer is expected to show up in this first game of the season Sunday at Fort McPherson. The public is invited.

There will be a small admission charge to defray expenses. Polo will continue to be played every Sunday at Fort McPherson until cold weather makes playing impossible.

Smithies Lick Erie Lions, 14 to 7

By Earnest Harwell.

Tech High Smithies outfought, outplayed, and outscored a heavier and more experienced Erie Academy eleven, 14 to 7, in the opening game of Atlanta's 1936 football season last night at Ponce de Leon park. It was the Smithies' fourth victory in six games with Erie.

Tech High's line charges with the vigor and drive of the Smithies of old. Their backfield showed speed and deception. Captain Culpepper, center, and Ralph Plaster, end, were stalwarts on the line. And it was Bobby Pair, fleet-footed halfback, and Paul Ellis, who did the kicking and passing, that gave the Smithies a tremendous edge in the backfield.

Bob Thurbon, Ernie's all-star quarterback, was the entire Erie eleven. He guided the team, passed, kicked and ran. Thurbon was the only lion who the Smithies failed to stop.

GREAT LINE.

Stan Novak, Bill Nemens, and John Kalakowski were great on the Erie line. It was Kalakowski who showed the large crowd of prep fans how to catch passes.

The Lions scored first.

After a series of exchanges of kicks with Ellis and Thurbon matching their long punts, Erie took the ball on Tech High's 47-yard line. Thurbon went around end for seven yards. Then Grygo made it a first down on the Smithies' 35-yard line.

On first down Thurbon faded back and tossed a 25-yard pass to Kalakowski, who ran five yards to Tech High's 5-yard line. Thurbon tried two thrusts at center but could get a total of only 2 yards. There the quarter ended with the score tied, nothing to nothing.

On the first play of the second period with fourth down and one to go, Thurbon went over for the touchdown. Grygo went back to kick the extra point, but foiled the Smithies by passing over the goal line to Kalakowski for the score.

SMITHIES SCORE.

But the Smithies were not to be downed. After an exchange of punts, Ellis, Smithie back, punted low and the ball hit Thurbon, the Erie safety man, and was recovered by Plaster, of the Smithies, on the Lions' 10-yard line.

Pair got 5 yards on a reverse. Then after Harrison failed at center, Pair again took the ball and skirted end for a touchdown. Ellis kicked the point, tying the count, 7-7. The Smithies were making the breaks.

Tech High received in the second half and without relinquishing the ball marched to a touchdown and victory. Ellis' pass to Wallace put the Smithies on Erie's 14-yard line. After Stanford got 2 at center, Pair skirted end, cut off tackle and went on to a touchdown. Ellis again converted.

STREAK HALTED.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(AP)—The knockout streak of Baby Casanova was abruptly halted in Madison Square Graden tonight when Johnny Morro, up-and-coming Harlem lightweight, won a 10-round decision over the Mexican in one of the preliminaries to the Cerefino Garcia-Cleto Locatelli welterweight fight.

ATLANTA'S ACE GIVES FOE, FANS RUN FOR MONEY

Donald Budge Advances to Finals With Victory Over Parker.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 11. (AP)—Bryan (Bitsy) Grant Jr., the pint-sized tennis rebel, almost caught an indifferent Fred Perry off guard today, but finally lost to the Englishman, who gained the final of the United States singles tennis championship against California's Don Budge, while Helen Jacobs fought her way to her fifth straight final and will defend her crown against Alice Marble tomorrow.

A crowd of 10,000, pulling for an upset similar to the one Bitsy cracked three years ago when he beat the defending champion, Ellsworth Vines, almost groaned its disappointment as the scrappy southerner went down to a 3-4, 3-6, 7-5, 6-2 defeat. Perry, apparently in the mood for anything but a tennis match, loafed through the first three sets and finally went to work in the fourth, although at no time was he really going under a full head of steam.

Perry joined the crowd in marveling at the little Atlantan's tireless retrieving in the first set, which Perry won at 6-4. "Bitsy" ran all over the place, making recoveries that were seemingly impossible.

Grant opened by breaking Perry's service in the first game and Perry promptly retaliated and then games followed service until the tenth, when Perry put on the pressure for the first time and blasted Grant's delivery.

The American had to overcome a 15-40 lead to hold service in the five-times-deuced sixth game and Perry had to do the same in the thrice-deuced eighth game, both of which were marked by long rallies, many of which were finished off with scorching placements.

Early in the match Perry appeared to be bothered by the third finger on his racquet hand. He halted play to ask for some tape, but when it arrived he didn't use it.

GRANT WINS SECOND.

Grant got off to an auspicious start in the second set, breaking Perry's service at love in the first game and running a 3-1 lead. Try as he might, Perry, up to that point, couldn't outsteady Bitsy.

The Briton bore down and won the fifth on service at love and broke Grant's delivery in the sixth as he scored with two placements that caught the Georgian flat-footed.

Then Grant rose to all of his five feet in height and had 7,000 spectators almost tumbling out of their seats as he broke Perry in the seventh and ninth games to capture the set, 6-3.

Perry fell into repeated errors, either netting the ball or driving it out, as he tried to match Grant in a steady baseline game during that three-game stretch.

Perry won the third set, 7-5, and led two sets to one.

At the start of the third set, Perry, who had been playing in somewhat uncertain form, looked like he had decided to settle down to business as he pulled away to a 3-1 lead. But Bitsy, heartened by winning the second set, kept on fighting and broke Perry's service in the sixth game, plunging Perry into mistakes by some fine lobbing and squaring the count.

SERVICE BREAKS.

Thereafter, the next five games resulted in service breaks, giving Perry a 6-5 lead. Bitsy got off to a bad start, serving the tenth game, and quickly trailed 15-40 and then scored a placement but on the next point a lob missed the baseline by feet.

When they walked off court both players looked like members of the St. Louis Cardinals' gashouse gang. Grant fell half a dozen times and was covered with grass stains from head to foot, plus the fact his trousers were torn at the knees. Perry took a header in the final game and returned to his feet rubbing his nose. The

Hubbell Beats Cubs for 13th Straight as Cardinals Split Two

GIANTS INCREASE LEAD OVER FIELD TO 4 CONTESTS

Carl Allows Four Hits in 23d; Card Rookie Bats Hard.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Carl Hubbell's long left arm manufactured another four-hit ball game today and the Giants hurled back the Chicago Cubs, 5 to 1, in the opener of a two-game series before 15,000 fans.

The victory, which increased the Giants' lead over the second-place Cardinals to four full games and over the third-place Cubs to six full games, was the lean southpaw's twenty-third of the season and his thirteenth in a row. This is the best record turned in by a Giant twirler since Burleigh Grimes, the old spitball star, hung up 13 in a row back in 1927.

The Giants got a total of eight blows off Davis, Charlie Root, Roy Henshaw and Clay Bryant, the four Cub hurlers.

The game produced some of the best defensive fielding seen here in many seasons, most of it contributed by the Cubs.

Twice the visitors stopped Giant rallies with sensational stops and throws. Phil Cavarretta, Cub first sacker, flung himself prone on the ground to take Ott's hot grounder in the third with his gloved hand. Bill Herman raced far to his left to scoop up a hot one off the bat of Ripple in the same inning and throw him out at first. In the next frame, Herman made an equally difficult stop and throw to nab Terry at first.

CARDS SPLIT.

The St. Louis Cardinals fell four games behind the league-leading Giants by getting an even break in a double-header with the Brooklyn Dodgers, losing the nightcap 5 to 4 before Van Mungo's effective pitching, after winning the opener 12 to 8.

Don Gutteridge, recruit third baseman, hit two homers, drove in five runs and scored four times himself in the first game. Relief Hurler George Earnshaw had shut off a Brooklyn rally in the ninth.

The Pittsburgh Pirates touched up young Bill Weir for five runs in the first inning and then pushed on to a 10-to-3 victory over the Bees.

HALLAHAN OUT.

The Phillies defeated Cincinnati 9 to 6 in the first game of the series. Hallahan who started in the box for the Reds, was knocked out in the sixth inning when the Phils pushed over four runs to break a 5-to-5 tie and win.

Passeau, who started for the Phils, was relieved by Syl Johnson in the second inning and the latter received credit for the victory.

Chuck Klein led the Phils attack with three hits, including two doubles. Riggs hit a home run, a three-bagger and a single for the Reds.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(AP)—All reserved seats for the Giants-Cardinals double-header Sunday have been sold, Eddie Brannick, Giants' secretary, announced today, but 45,000 unreserved seats in the pavilions and bleachers will go on sale Sunday. Bleacher seats will go on sale at 8 a. m. (eastern standard) Sunday and grandstand seats an hour later.

Jackets, Bulldogs Await Scrimmage

News Is Received From Givens; Squad in Trim Now.

By Jack Troy.

There was a sort of lull before the storm yesterday afternoon at Rose Bowl field. Not that there was any cessation of activities or anything of the sort, but the rough work was ruled out, for the most part, and signal drill held the major spot.

This presaged a hearty scrimmage today, ending the second week of work.

And Coach W. A. Alexander affirmed the fact that there would be some scrimmage today. In fact, there will be about 30 minutes of action, with the Bee boys deploying against the varsity players.

The varsity backs ran plays against the varsity ends and backs yesterday, with Scrappy Edwards and young Jimmy Moore, the watchcharm backs, doing some fine and fancy broken field running.

RUN SIGNALS.

At the conclusion of this drill, the varsity backs discarded their pads and ran signals for the rest of the afternoon. They were joined by the varsity linemen who still wore their pads. The linesmen had the usual amount of contact work yesterday.

There was word from the missing bridegroom, A. C. Givens, yesterday.

Coach Alex received a letter from Givens stating that he had been ill and hoped to rejoin the squad soon.

Givens, a sophomore center from Mount Hope, W. Va., will hold down the pivot position for the "B" team when he returns.

The Jackets have advanced far in conditioning since the opening of practice less than two weeks ago. The boys that show any excess of weight are few and far between.

APPLIES WHIP.

Coach Alexander wanted the boys to perspire this week, so he set them down out under the sun and applied the whip, so to speak. The results are easy to see. The Jacket squad is trim

Specators watched Ole Koon Konemann speed under long passes yesterday and settled back dreamily. Konemann is a model pass receiver. He gauges his pace just right and takes long aerials in stride.

Rangy Bill Jordan is another pass receiver who would be welcome on any squad. He's a long-striding end and handles a pass like an outfielder going after a hard hit ball.

The Jackets have made splendid progress. And they are ready for a real scrimmage today. The opening game with Presbyterian is less than weeks away.

Tars Take Second In Play-Off Series

NORFOLK, Va., Sept. 11.—(AP)—Bill (Lefty) Yocke, leading southpaw of the Piedmont circuit, handcuffed the Richmond colts here today, 6 to 0, while his mates accorded him perfect support for their second straight game of the Shaughnessy playoff.

The series continues tomorrow night at Richmond with Big Bob Walsh scheduled to occupy the mound for the Colts and Hiram Bithorn, the Puerto Rican, firing for the Tars.

Neun's Tars got to Johnny Leonardo, Richmond right-hander, in the first stanza for a marker, but the big splurge came in the sixth frame when the Piedmont league champions dented the rubber four times.

Vito Tamulis Blanks Bisons With Five Hits

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 11.—(UP) Vito Tamulis shut out the Buffalo Bisons with five hits while he and Ernie Koy hit home runs to give the Newark Bears a 2-0 victory tonight.

The series now stands at two games to one in favor of the Bisons in the battle for a berth in the final playoff for the governor's cup and the right to represent the International league in the Little World Series against the American association winner.

Tamulis hit his homer in the fifth into the left-field stands for Newark's first tally.

Mehre Puts on Last-Minute Touches for First Skirmish.

ATHENS, Ga., Sept. 11.—(AP)—Last-minute touches were put on the Georgia Bulldogs this afternoon in a drill preparatory to the first actual scrimmage Saturday afternoon.

Red Devil squad will be chosen largely on the basis of play of the various players in the initial skirmish. Hopes and fears of the Georgia coaches relative to the players will begin to crystallize as a result.

Pete Tinsley, halfback who is suffering with a pulled muscle, will miss the tussle along with Roy Gatchell, tackle, Atlanta. Tinsley's trouble is requiring more time than had been first anticipated.

Three offensive teams will be used during the one-hour sham battle. Lineup composed of Bonner and Farren, ends; Milton and Fitzpatrick, tackles; Martin and Hodgson, guards; Richards, center; either Moran or Miller, quarterback; Harry Stevens and Jim Cavan, halfbacks; and Holland, fullback, will likely start off defense.

SETTLE VARSITY.

With the initial combat as a milepost, Georgia coaches hope to practically settle the varsity next week. Four battles will be held. The Red Devil squad will be announced either Sunday or the first of the week. Next week-end the Georgia Bulldog mentor intends seeing Mercer in action against a south Georgia team. Asked if he would take any of the players along, he answered definitely in the negative.

NOT GOOD IDEA.

"That is not a good idea. The players either would become discouraged or would become over confident," he explained.

Rain interrupted practice once this afternoon. Players were careful lest they pull muscles, due to the change in the weather. Woodrow Tucker, halfback, Atlanta, was reported to have joined the "pulled muscle" list. A comparatively light workout was held as previously planned.

With clear weather likely Saturday it is believed that the players will be ready and in high spirits. A lecture will not be held in the morning. The afternoon drill will start at 3 o'clock and will "continue until dark."

Coach Weems Baskin was on the field again today after making arrangements at Augusta for the "Spec" Towns welcome which will be held the latter part of the month. Alf Anderson returned to action after having been confined to his room with a cold.

Mehre Plans Shift For Forrest Towns.

ATHENS, Ga., Sept. 11.—Coach Harry Mehre intimated tonight he is seriously considering shifting Forrest (Spec) Towns, ace hurdler, from right to left end when he reports for practice around September 21.

Disappointment at play of the corps of left flankmen and outstanding progress of Marvin Gillespie, Elberton, at the other terminal, were given as the reasons for such consideration.

YANKS ASSAULT TIGERS; GEHRIG RAPS HIS 46TH

Luke Appling Gets Five Hits as White Sox Beat A's, 17-2.

DETROIT, Sept. 11.—(AP)—The New York Yankes today uncorked the murderous batting power that carried them to the American league pennant and pounded out a 14-to-4 victory over the dethroned Detroit Tigers.

The 15-hit assault featured a nine-run spree in the eighth inning, in which Lou Gehrig walked the first time up and hit his 46th homer with two on base on his second trip to the plate in the same frame; George Selkirk, also up twice, singled and doubled; Jake Powell hit two singles, and Tony Lazzeri doubled and walked.

Selkirk also hit a homer with one on in the third. Pat Malone, who has been used mostly for relief roles this season, went the route for the Yanks, chalking up his 11th victory of the year.

Tying the modern major league record of hits off a single pitcher, the second-place Chicago White Sox pounded a total of 26 hits off Horace Lisenbee to overwhelm the Philadelphia Athletics, 17 to 2, in the first of a two-game series.

SIX HITS.

A ladies' day crowd of 14,000 saw Monty Stratton hold the A's to six hits to win easily his second game within two weeks after being out since last May, when he was operated on for appendicitis. The Sox now have won seven of their last eight games.

Zeke Bonura, Luke Appling and Mike Kreevich each made five hits.

Knocking Dennis Galehouse from the box before he could retire a batter, the Washington Senators piled up a five-run lead in the first inning and coasted to a 7-to-2 victory over the Indians.

26TH HOMER.

Earl Averill's 26th home run of the season was one of the six hits Earl Whitehill alolwed the Indians.

Bill Werber smashed a home run with two teammates on base in the seventh inning to insure a 6-to-2 victory for the Boston Red Sox over the St. Louis Browns.

Chick Hafey May Try Comeback Next Year

BERKELEY, Cal., Sept. 11.—(AP)—Chick Hafey, former big league baseball star now on the voluntary retired list, said today he was considering trying a comeback next year with the Cincinnati club, which holds his contracts.

Hafey retired two years ago in midseason following a severe sinus condition. He is still suffering from the affliction and has been under the care of a doctor for more than a year.

Brown, Roche, Raines On Mat Card Tonight

Orville Brown meets Derve Roche and Dick Raines faces Dick Lever tonight at the ball park in a pair of wrestling struggles that should offer a thrilling evening's entertainment. Frank Brown and Jack Thomas will open the show at 8:30. The appearance of Promoter Frank Speer as referee for the finish match between Brown and Roche adds to the interest of the program.

Brown and Roche went an hour to a draw last week, the match drawing unusual praise from all sides. Fans by the hundreds besieged Promoter Speer with requests for a return meeting of the two stars. Critics, including Charley Renthrop, veteran Memphis mat promoter and referee, declared the bout to be the best they had seen in a number of years.

Tonight's meeting is the fifth for Roche and Brown. They hold a victory a piece over each other and twice have wrestled to draws. This finish match, which of course carries no-time limit, will be their first real opportunity to definitely decide the better man.

Speer entered the picture as referee when neither Brown nor Roche could agree upon a third man.

Dick Raines, terror of the mat and winner over Chief Chewchki before 5,000 fans last week in one of the bloodiest battles on record here, encounters Dick Lever, 240-pound Kentuckian, in the semi-final. Raines gave the Gypsy a terrific beating, but indications are that Lever, who recently beat both Pat O'Shocker and Karl Davis, will give the Houston Assassin an uncomfortable evening.

Raines now holds the opinion that he can lick the world, even without his pile driver. Lever is capable of pulling the biggest upset of the year and sending the fans home in a jubilant frame of mind.

This is Spear's first Saturday night offering, baseball and football night games making the change in dates necessary. However, the young matchmaker contends the fans will turn out any night to see a card like he has arranged for tonight and advance ticket sales at Marshall & Reynolds bear out his contentions.

Mrs. Granger Celebrates 86th Birthday At Family Reunion and Buffet Supper

Mrs. A. O. Granger, third president of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, celebrated her eighty-sixth birthday anniversary recently at the home of her son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Hansell on Woodland avenue with a family reunion at which a buffet supper was served in the garden. Mrs. Granger is a beloved pioneer figure in Georgia's organized club work, and it was largely through her efforts that the Georgia federation has made such splendid progress since it was organized 41 years ago.

Mrs. Granger is also listed among the founders of Tallulah Falls Industrial school which is owned and operated by Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. The Arthur Otis Granger perpetual scholarship is a gift to the Tallulah school from Mrs. Granger, who established the scholarship in memory of her husband, the late Mr. Granger.

For years, Mrs. Granger's chief interest centered always in children's welfare and their education. She worked untiringly for the former when she served as chairman of child labor for the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Granger's valuable services to the state federation and Tallulah school were highly recognized recently when she and Mrs. Lindsey Johnson, of Rome, who served as the second president of the Georgia Federation, were made trustees emeritus for life for the school, where Georgia's mountain children are educated.

Mrs. Granger, who is the former Miss Caroline Dickson Gregory, was bornin Philadelphia, but moved to the south during her girlhood. She resided in Cartersville, Ga., until she came to Atlanta 15 years ago. Since moving south she has manifested a keen interest in the south and its development along civic, religious and educational lines. Mrs. Granger is a beloved and highly esteemed member of the Ormewood Presbyterian church in which she has worked unceasingly for years.

Twenty members of Mrs. Granger's family were present for her eighty-sixth birthday celebration. She is the mother of Mrs. William A. Hansell, of this city, with whom she makes her home, and Rene Granger, of Bogota, Colombia, South America, who journeys to Atlanta each year for a visit to his mother.

Friendly Counsel

By CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondence invited. Your name held in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield, care The Atlanta Constitution.

"Old age is a horrible nightmare to me," said a woman of 65 as she fumbled in her purse for some change. "I can't see anything, I can't lay my hands on anything and I hear very little of what is said about me. By the time I am 70 life won't be worth living."

"You scare me to death," remarked her younger companion. "I have been thinking that you could get ready for old age as you get ready for a trip and when you arrive find that you have everything necessary to make it pleasant."

And so one can, but the preparation must be made in youth with eyes, ears, mind and spirit. There are sorrows and trials a-plenty to be met. Time works havoc with body and mind. Disappointments, separations, retirements are part and parcel of old age. The old person can no longer go places and see things; he has to sit still and subsist on what he has stored away. He has to learn resignation to the inevitable slowing down of bodily and mental processes. He has to accommodate himself to being on the shelf. Three things he must have to say with Rabbi Ben Ezra: "Grow old with me the best is yet to be." Money in his pocket, interests in his mind, faith in his heart.

As long as we live we are dependent upon the old pocketbook, our own or someone's else. A few strike it rich by way of good breaks. A few inherit fortunes but the vast majority have to practice thrift to accumulate enough to boil the pot and put something in it. The producing years are limited though we are prone to forget this when in the midst of them. If we don't fill the purse before those years are past it will never be full and the most we can expect for old age is a few pennies tossed in by family, friends, charitable institutions or the government. Dependence at best and maybe penury.

It is said that we learn nothing after 50. We just subsist on what we have learned before that age arrives. Half a century ought to be long enough for the average individual to fill the cistern but it is amazing how many are dry.

An old man was recently ruminating on life. Suddenly as though he had an inspiration he said, "You know, the only thing that doesn't turn sour on analysis is faith in God, and I haven't it. My business ventures have been disastrous, my marriage was a bitter disappointment. My friends have died or fallen away. My children haven't taken full advantage of the opportunities I have been able to give them. I am self-sufficient after a fashion because I have always been a student and have stored my mind with a wealth of information and culture, but the one thing that every man needs I haven't—faith in God—and I am afraid it is too late to get it."

It is bad enough to be dependent on loved ones or come down to a charity bed in a hospital. It is bad enough to be buried in a borrowed grave or at public expense, but it is infinitely worse to close the eyes and go out into a night in which there is no light of faith.

NEW QUARTERS GIVEN TO TRAFFIC BUREAU

Larger Facilities Provided as Police Plan Drive for Reducing Toll.

The police traffic bureau will be moved in a few days to spacious new quarters on the main floor of the police station, where all traffic records will be kept and where two windows will be provided for payment of collaterals by motorists cited on traffic offenses, it was announced yesterday by Captain Jack Malcolm, head of the bureau.

With the removal of the bureau to new quarters, traffic authorities will take additional steps to enforce laws and to lower Atlanta's yearly accident toll, Captain Malcolm said. A conference in which recorders, Chief of Police T. O. Sturdivant and other traffic officers will consider traffic problems is planned within the next few days.

Organization of schoolboy patrols in the public schools, with Patrolman M. L. Thomas as director, will be undertaken by the bureau. Patrolman Thomas returned yesterday from Knoxville after inspecting that city's schoolboy patrol system. Students in the upper grades will be selected to guard the safety of school children at crossings.

Six more persons died as the result of traffic accidents in Atlanta and suburbs for the four weeks ending August 29 than for the corresponding period last year, according to a mortality bulletin issued yesterday by the Bureau of Census, Department of Commerce. Twenty more deaths due to automobile accidents in the city were noted for a 52-week period ending August 29 than for a similar period ending August 31, 1935.

A total of 19 daths due to traffic accidents in this section occurred in Atlanta during the month ending August 29, in comparison with only seven deaths for the same period in 1935. The traffic mortality rate for the same period, based on 100,000 population, rose from 29.5 to 36.5.

Total number of daeths occurring from traffic accidents in 86 cities for the month ending August 29 was 665, in comparison with 611 for the same period last year, an increase of 54.

EMPLOYMENT OF PWA REACHES PEAK IN JUNE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Secretary Ickes reported today that direct labor on Public Works Administration projects reached its peak in June when 349,572 persons were at work.

A study by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, Ickes said, showed employment in providing materials and equipment was highest in July, when orders totalled $41,474,532.

Ickes said cold weather held back the PWA program during the winter, when there was a low of 176,764 in February. The average hourly wage during the first six months of this year was 75 cents.

'YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!'

By IDA JEAN KAIN.

MUSCLES AT WORK.

If you knew for sure that exercise would trim down your hips, nip in your waist and make you feel young . . . wouldn't you exercise? Corrective exercise will help you to look every inch a beauty and feel every inch alive.

IDA JEAN KAIN

The daily dozen now amounts to body proportioning. The old setting-up exercise brought out bulging biceps but missed the figure controlling muscles. Kinesiology, which is the science of bodily movements, has eliminated waste motion and put exercise on Fifth avenue.

An exercise isn't always all it seems to be. There may be plenty of action and it may look very effective without using the muscles most important to your figure. Corrective exercise gives you the best mechanical position for use of the muscles underlying the fat pads.

Fat settles in the muscle-lazy areas, so it pays to know the exact positions which put these indolent muscles to work and change bulges to curves.

One set of lazy muscles is located on the back of the upper arm. Fat settles there even though the arms are almost constantly in use because the triceps muscles are not involved in ordinary movement. Kinesiology exposes these lazy muscles and proves that they work only when the arms are held in a horizontal position or in putting force behind a blow. Most arm movements use only the forearms—the biceps—which accounts for the tendency to pendulous flesh on the back of the upper arm.

The exercise position which uses the triceps muscles also strengthens the pectoral muscles, which support the bust, since the muscular network is interrelated. Contour and position of the bust depend upon the muscles as much as upon adipose tissue.

The bending exercise isn't what it's cracked up to be, either. When you bend over and touch your toes to reduce your waistline, you get the back muscles. Stretching and twisting movements are the ones which affect the waistline. These movements have been tested and they will slim down your waistline inches.

You may walk miles every day and still have a hip problem. The rule seems to be that the gluteus maximus—the fleshy muscle on the back of the hip—is only brought into action at an angle of 45 degrees. Walking up stairs or a steep incline reduces the hips, but walking on a level is not vigorous enough to affect this measurement.

By knowing the right position you can put all the lazy muscles to work for your figure. Position is an important part of the exercises given daily in the column, so don't do them hit or miss fashion or you may miss the bulges.

Send for the leaflet of "General Exercises" and get started right.

Culbertson on Contract

By ELY CULBERTSON,
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

Herewith is presented another portion of Mr. Culbertson's latest work on contract, the "Gold Book of Bidding and Play," which is being reproduced in this column in daily installments.

THE DISTRIBUTIONAL COUNT.

The distributional count summarizes in a few simple tables and formulae the entire process of bidding valuation. Many players will find it difficult and troublesome to visualize the later play of the cards and thus determine quickly the total of winners and losers in the hand. The distributional count expresses the same natural methods in a shorter mathematical way. Players will find that, in learning the distributional count, they are actually mastering the principles of play.

One of the features of the distributional count is that, except with strong suits where it is easier to count the losers, the length values of suits are counted separately and the honor values of the suit are added.

Thus, if I bid with A Q 7 6 5, I simply count two winners for the five card length to which I add one and one-half for the A-Q, giving a total value of three and one-half winners, or between three and four winners, depending on a finesse. The other way of valuing the suit is by placing the missing K J 10 in opponents' hands, assuming 3-3-2 distribution and deducting either one or two losers from the five card length, depending on a finesse, which gives the same result, to wit: three and one half winners. It is obviously simpler with weak suits to count the length values first and then add the honor values.

In the distributional count all the length values are automatically fixed, but the value of the trump length is double that of the side suit length for bids of one until partner has been heard from. When he denies the bid suit, its value is reduced to the value of any side length.

After a little practice it is desirable that the player forget the distributional count and value the hands naturally. It will offer the best proof that the count had served its purpose well.

TODAY'S HAND.

Unless average contract players are a great deal less human than I think they are, they probably derive sadistic satisfaction from hearing about the "falls of the mighty." Certainly, they have to listen to or read a plethora of tales in which the experts are glorified. So now I rush to the rescue with a hand on which 18 of the nation's leading lights bit the dust in a recent tournament of first importance! Only two declarers, in the common contract of four hearts, played correctly and were successful.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 heart	Pass	1 spade	Pass
2 hearts	Pass	3 hearts	Pass
4 hearts	Pass	Pass	Pass

Three rounds of diamonds by West resulted in a ruff by East, who then returned the club queen. After winning, returned the club queen. After winning, heart ace, but when East failed to follow, almost all then "went wrong." They led the other club honor, and then ruffed the losing club. But West discarded a spade and they could not return to their own hands without conceding West a trump trick.

The two victorious declarers saw that an attempt to ruff a club must go wrong; West had shown six diamonds and three hearts. Whatever his other four cards were, he would have to make a heart trick if a club ruff were attempted. Moreover, since West had failed to overcall one heart, it was hardly possible that he held the spade king besides his good diamond suit. Therefore, a squeeze on East was very propitious, and actually came off. Every trump was drawn and East finally had to let go the stopper in either spades or clubs.

TODAY'S QUESTION.

Question: Why may declarer not count ruffers?

Answer: Because he counts his long trumps as full tricks, and no card can take more than one trick.

THE RETURN OF JOAN

BY JOSEPH McCORD

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:

Having lost her job in the city, Joan Kendall returns to her parents who own Layland Cottage near Waples Beach. One guest is Deeds McCune, on vacation because of eyes strained by long hours working on models used in window displays. He shies at being called an artist. Pretty Claire Lindsay and her wealthy mother are annual visitors at Layland. Gene Gaston is Agnes Lindsay's son by her first marriage. Elderly Dr. Sloan Elledge is a "nerve" case; he lost his wife and only child in a sea disaster. His brother John, also a physician, devotes his time to Sloan. When Claire tells Deeds that Gene had a "crush" on Joan four years ago his dislike of the suave young man increases. His heart jumps when Joan first calls him Mac. Claire, who practically traps him into swimming with her, is amazingly frank. Gene, after trying music, illustrating and landscape gardening, is busy now wheedling money out of mother. They see Dr. Sloan bathing in a secluded spot though Dr. John says he hates the sea because of his family's fate. They agree to say nothing pending developments. The Elledges came on Gene's rcommendation, Claire tells him. After saving Joan from the undertow, Deeds tells her he loves her. She says there is no one else but things must remain as they are. Deeds is surprised by the reply, to a letter he wrote to a New York friend. It drops from his pocket, Dr. John picks it up and later Deeds notices a thumb smudge on the paper inside. As he mulls over this he suddenly says, "Of all the nitwits!" NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT XII.

"Yes, you can. There's always a way to do things." Deeds leaned over the arm of his chair and spoke with quiet decision. "We can figure things out. Joan, if you like . . . between us."

"There's nothing to do," she repeated, almost fiercely. "I don't know why I'm bothering you with my small troubles, anyway."

"Because we're friends," he said simply. "Why not? I'd like to think that there was something I could ever do for you . . . like it better than anything I can think of. I'm going to pretend that you feel the same way. Do you mind?"

"No . . ." Joan returned hestitatingly. "I don't mind."

"Good. I'm glad I'm here. You've given me reason to believe that you're worried about . . . things. I don't know what it's all about, but don't worry . . . too much. You're white, free and 21 . . . even if you don't look it. There's always a way out of everything."

"Are you so sure?"

"Of course." Deeds assumed a confident air. "If you think there isn't, just give me a chance. I'll show you."

Joan smiled a trifle wistfully. She did not meet his eager glance, but continued to watch the distant horizon.

"Mac," she said guardedly. "I want you to tell me something. What has happened since we talked yesterday . . . about those two men, I mean? You've seen or heard something. What was it?"

"Nothing . . . of any importance," he returned evasively. Joan's level gaze made the answer difficult. "I can't get them out of my mind, that's all. Just have a feeling there is something queer there. I'd like to ask you something. Did I understand you to say they never had been here before?"

"I'm quite sure they never were."

"How did they stumble on this place? Do you happen to know?"

To Deeds' surprise, a faint color stole into Joan's cheeks. But she did not avoid his eyes.

"Mother told me," she said steadily. "It was Gene."

"Oh. Gaston . . . you mean." Deeds could not disguise his chagrin. "Friends of his then."

"Acquaintances, from what mother told me. I haven't noticed that they have much to do with one another."

"I guess he could tell you anything you wanted to know about them," Deeds offered bluntly.

Joan rose to her feet.

"I wouldn't ask," she said quietly. "And I must go in."

Deeds sat looking after her, too much surprised to speak.

Everything seemed changed again . . . by Gaston's coming in to the picture that way. Deeds had rather dismissed him, and here he was once more . . . just when things were going good. First, Claire had to barge in. Now, her brother . . . or whatever he was.

If it hadn't bene for those two, he would have felt that he was getting somewhere with Joan.

She had confessed a fear that her father and Dr. John, the fat one, were in cahoots over something. Now it developed that Gaston was a friend of the Elledges. They had come to Layland Cottage on his recommendation. And Gaston had turned up after an absence of several seasons. So had . . Joan.

That was the thing that hurt, sort of.

Kendall . . . the dumb ox . . . had made a funny crack. About Joan and Gaston picking the same time for a visit. And Joan's father didn't like the young man . . . couldn't find out what he was "doing." Then the one Claire pulled . . . about her brother having a "crush" on Joan. And Joan had given an impression that she and Gaston were almost strangers. Then turned right around and made a date with him for a ride.

Try and figure that one.

And now, she had said . . . right out of a clear sky . . . that she wouldn't ask Gaston about the Elledges. Then gone into the house without another word. Deeds wondered if he should feel encouraged. Was it another way of telling him that Gaston meant nothing to her? But she needn't have acted peeved about it. . . . Or was she peeved? If he didn't care so. . . .

Heck!

The sound of steps caused him to turn his head, in the vague hope that Joan was returning.

It proved to be young Middleton Beckham. He paused and regarded Deeds speculatively.

"Hello, there," the latter greeted.

"Hello."

Middleton perched himself in a precarious position on the porch railing and exhibited his teeth in a half-hearted smile.

"How are you this fine day?" Deeds experimented. It was his first encounter with the boy. And he was a funny looking little runt, with those skinny arms and legs.

"I'm all right."

"What do you do to amuse yourself down here? I don't believe there are any other kids around, are there?"

"No. I just fool around . . . go swimmin' with my dad every morning. They won't let me go in alone."

"Like the water?"

"Sure." Faint scorn in Middleton's voice.

"Let me know . . . any time your father can't go in with you. I'll be glad to take you."

"All right."

Deeds felt that he was not making much progress.

"What else do you do . . . by yourself?"

"Go to moving pictures," was the prompt reply.

"Westerns. There's a picture of Tom Mix every week up at the Beach. It's this afternoon."

"Good old Tom. I used to be a fan of his. Going to see him?"

"Nope. Spent my allowance," Middleton advised candidly.

Deeds grinned sympathetically, but he was thinking over a half-formed plan. This might be a good opportunity to put it into execution. It involved an errand to Waples and he preferred to remain at the cottage this afternoon.

"I was just wondering . . ." he began cautiously. "I've a letter that I'd like very much to get in the mail today. I haven't written it yet, but it wouldn't take over 10 minutes. If you felt like taking a walk up to the postoffice . . . we might fix it up for you to see Tom. Would your folks mind?"

"I won't ask 'em." Middleton lent himself wholeheartedly to the plan. "They never bother much where I go in the afternoons . . . just as long as I get back in time to wash. You know."

"Sure. That's fine. I'll go up and scribble that note for you. Do you want to stay here, or come along with me?"

"Maybe I'd better go with you."

Middleton amused himself with a magazine while Deeds sat at his table and wrote rapidly. He had the missive pretty well framed in his mind. It might be a fool stunt, but it wouldn't hurt anything to try it. Whatever the answer was, he'd feel more satisfied. And it might be of some use to Joan.

"You won't forget to mail it, I suppose?" he suggested to his messenger, as he sealed the envelope with a thump of his fist.

"Course not." Middleton tossed aside his reading with a weary gesture. "Got it done?"

"Done. Listen . . . what do they call you for short?"

"The kids at school call me Mid."

"All right, Mid. Here's the dope. I want this letter to go by air mail . . . it might save some time. I've marked it that way, so don't forget to ask for an air stamp. Here's a half-dollar. Okay?"

"Don't you want any change back?"

"Not this time."

"Gosh!" Middleton wriggled in an attempt to express himself suitably. "It only costs 15 cents to get in. . . ."

"Fair enough. Go again next week."

"Sure. Thanks."

Deeds lingered at his wondow until he saw the small form of the minister's son go scooting up the beach, taking the shortest route to Waples.

"I hope the old bozo's in town," he muttered to himself.

It rained the next day. And the next after that.

Not only was the sky wet and sullen, but there came a stiff wind out of the northeast and the surf was angry and full of churned sand. There was a chilliness in the atmosphere that crept through Layland Cottage and was reflected somewhat in the demeanor of the guests. The first day, their sweatered figures gathered around the wood fire in the lobby and tried to be cheerful in the face of bodily discomfort.

After 30 hours, there were few out "front" between meals and conversation became formal. It was to be presumed that the less hardy were taking comfort under their bed blankets.

Deeds McCune was more in evidence than any of the other unfortunates. He bathed and shaved savagely, and there was something morose in the fashion of his eating . . . although his appetite seemed to stand by him.

MANNERS OF THE MOMENT

They Have a "Good Chair" Phobia.

Guests who have good chair phobias are awfully difficult to handle. They'll sit anywhere but in the one comfortable chair you offer them. "Oh, I love to sit on the floor," they'll say. Or, "This is the kind I'm used to," they'll announce, picking out a straight-backed model just about half their size.

It's discouraging to a hostess. Her good chair remains empty all evening unless she sits in it herself.

We're all for a little more selfishness among guests. The next time you are offered a comfortable chair, for the love of your hostess, please take it. But if you don't then don't go running around telling every one that you were never as uncomfortable as you were in our Windsor desk chair last night.

UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

A LITTLE SATURDAY TALK.

Five hundred years ago, there lived in England a woman who seems to have had strange powers of seeing the future, or at least of making good guesses about what would come in later time. She was known as "Mother Shipton" and wrote verses to tell what she thought would happen.

Perhaps best known are the lines in which she foretold the automobile:

"A carriage without horse shall go, disaster fill the world with woe . . . through towering hills, proud man shall ride, no horse or mule move by his side."

Surely we do ride through "towering hills" in motor cars, and "disaster" has come in the form of automobile accidents. Thousands of persons are killed each year in such accidents. In time to come the terrible toll may be cut down by better safety rules than we have now.

Among the other lines said to have been written by Mother Shipton are these:

"Beneath the waters men shall walk, shall ride, shall sleep, and even talk . . . In nineteen hundred and twenty-six, build houses light of straw and sticks, for then shall mighty wars be planned. When pictures seem alive with movements free, when boats like fishes swim beneath the sea, when men like birds shall scour the sky, then half this world, deep drenched in blood, shall die."

Modern diving suits, submarines (containing men who ride and sleep and "even talk" under the water), aviators who "scour the skies," and moving pictures seem to answer the words. All those things existed at the outbreak of the World War, but if Mother Shipton was speaking of that war, she placed the date 12 years too late. We might say, however, that 12 years was not much of an error for someone who wrote about it 500 years ago!

Mother Shipton lived before Columbus sailed across the Atlantic and found the New World. In her day, gunpowder, cannon and the printing press were new inventions in Europe. A few persons had had "dreams" about flying, but no one had risen in a balloon or airplane. The automobile, the submarine, and the moving picture were totally unknown.

Now that we have all those things, with other wonders no doubt ahead, we should not let them be used to make our world a place of sadness. We should have a happy world to live in.

AVERAGE PRICE.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 11.—(AP)—The average price of middling cotton at 10 southern markets today was 12.32 cents a pound.

ATLANTA SPOT COTTON.

Atlanta spot cotton closed steady. Middling, f. o. b., 12.75.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Buying interests controlled the cotton market today and prices ended from 3 to 8 points higher.

The market was caught between two conflicting trends, with bad weather in the west encouraging buying operations, while an increase in selling worked for bearish interests.

Distant months were not under as much pressure today, and made the best gains with March closing 8 points higher at 12.03, and May 8 higher at 12.02. October finished at 12.12 and December at 12.15.

Good cables aided domestic prices at the first call and during the first two hours of dealings prices touched their best levels of the day. Liverpool hailed a report that the government would liquidate no loan cotton until next spring as decidedly constructive and the English market looked for higher prices in the coming months.

Crop deterioration was reported from Texas and Oklahoma, the two states that have borne the brunt of the drouth in the cotton belt.

Heavy sales of spot cotton at southern markets this week aided bullish sentiment today.

Port receipts, 79,797; week, 281,000; season, 796,491; last season, 713,804. Exports, 21,540; week, 70,412; season, 343,845; last season, 347,406. Port stocks, 1,545,082. Stocks on shipboard at New Orleans, Galveston and Houston were 42,875; last year 26,002. Spot sales at southern markets were 69,452; last year, 25,611.

COTTON IS STEADY ON N. Y. MARKET.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(AP)—While somewhat irregular, cotton was generally steady today on continued trade and commission house buying. After selling to 12.22 at the start, December eased to 12.11 but closed at 12.17 with the general market steady at net advances of 3 to 9 points.

The opening was very steady at an advance of 6 to 9 points with active months selling 8 to 11 points net higher during the first few minutes in response to relatively steady Liverpool cables, foreign and domestic trade buying and covering. This demand was supplied by realizing and southern hedging and prices eased. Near months were relatively easy.

The decline seemed to attract increased trade buying, however, and last prices showed rallies of 4 to 7 points from the lowest. Exports today 22,217, making a total of 330,116 for the season. Port receipts 67,942. Port stocks 1,537,767.

Market Outlook

By MAX BUCKINGHAM.

(Copyright, 1936, by United Press.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(UP)—Business improvement tonight continued to be the dominating factor before stock market operators, although caution prevails until after the Maine election Monday.

Trading today was a little less active and prices closed irregular. There was considerable selectivity in the market—particularly in some of the mail order and amusement issues—and the spottiness near the close could be traced entirely to professional adjustments for the week-end.

Meanwhile business reports continued extremely favorable. Included in the items before the market were:

1—Retail trade increased 3 to 8 per cent over the previous week and 12 to 20 per cent over the 1935 week. Dun & Bradstreet commented that students would be better equipped this year than any time in the last five years.

2—Carloadings for the week ended September 5 totaled 764,680, the highest since October, 1931, a gain of 10,938 over the preceding week and 172,739 over the 1935 week. June railway net income was announced as $8,902,459 compared with a loss in June, 1935.

3—Export copper price rose to 9.875, the highest level since 1931. Increased demand reportedly coming from both commercial and armament sources. This increased the possibility that the domestic price might be increased as export is now ahead of the local quotation.

In the recent market rise, utilities have been laggards. Another obstacle confronted them tomorrow in view of President Roosevelt's address before the World Power Conference in Washington. His statement that more government power projects may be developed if necessary to bring about wider distribution of cheap electricity came at a time utility companies felt they were at least temporarily free of government pressure.

Cottonseed Oil and Cottonseed Products

NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Bleachable cottonseed oil held fairly steady today although price movements were narrow and the market closed net unchanged to 4 points lower. The steadiness of the lard and cotton markets and covering in advance of the bureau report, held the market comparatively steady, although there were partial reactions near the close under realizing. The trade is expecting disappearance of between 300,000 and 350,000 barrels during August against 298,556 in July and 350,493 in August last year.

Sales were 121 contracts. Bleachable spot nominal; September closed 10.35; October 10.37; December 10.38; January 10.39; March 10.43.

MEMPHIS.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 11.—Prime cottonseed meal futures (41 per cent) closed easier. Closing bids f.o.b. Memphis: September 30.50; October 30.60; November 30.60; December 30.50; January 30.65; February 30.75; March 31.00; April 31.00; 4,200 sales.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(AP)—A two-minded stock market worked at cross purposes in today's session.

Further helpful developments in business and industry brought fitful buying periods in selected issues while many of the recent leaders fell back under quiet profit taking.

Brokers attributed the somewhat lackadaisical performance partly to concern over unsettled European affairs, with emphasis on the French politico-financial problem.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues yielded .2 of a point at 68.7. Transfers totaled 1,404,270 shares against 1,545,250 yesterday.

Western Union came to the fore with a gain of 1 1-2 points at 91, upon publication of its seven months' statement disclosing profits of $3.66 a share.

New highs for the year or longer were registered by American Telephone, Bethlehem, Montgomery Ward and a number of others. Telephone, however, finished 7-8 of a point lower at 178 7-8. Bethlehem held a gain of 1-8 at 71 1-8 and Montgomery Ward was up 1 3-8 at 49 7-8.

The delayed freight loadings report for last week revealed a slightly better than seasonal increase, but most carrier shares were backward. The motors and utilities did little or nothing. A few oils and coppers displayed an upward slant as the positions of these industries indicated improvement.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(AP)—A sustained demand for bonds with a speculative tinge buoyed the listed market in fairly active trading today.

Concentration of trading in the domestic corporate section, where turnover was $12,450,000, face value, was largely responsible for a total volume of $13,966,000, which compared with Thursday's aggregate of $16,659,000. Trading activity in both the government and foreign divisions dropped from the preceding day's level.

The price of rail obligations included in the Associated Press average rose to a new high for the year to 95.1, up .1 of a point on balance. This was the sixth consecutive day the group established a new peak. The 10 industrials used in the compilation were unchanged; the utility group declined .1 of a point and the low-yield division remained at the highest level since the record has been kept.

Rail issues scoring comparatively wide gains included North Western 6 1-2s, up 1 5-8 to 49 1-4, Lehigh Valley 5s, up 2 1-4 to 82 1-2, Maine Central 4 1-2s up 1 7-8 to 82 1-4 and New Orleans, Texas & Mexico 5 1-2s, up 1 3-4, to 46 1-2. Missouri Pacific 5s at 42 1-2, Frisco 4s at 27 1-2 and Rock Island 4s at 39 were fractionally improved.

Turnover in the federal loan quarter was about half the preceding day's total and final prices showed gains and losses ranging to 4-32. Active demand sent Polish government obligations up for gains of 1 7-8 to 3 points as other foreign issues moved in either direction within a one-point radius.

Brokers' Views

STOCK OPINIONS.

COURTS & CO.—The irregularity in Friday's session caused little change in the averages. The coming week holds promise of better levels for selected issues.

FENNER & BEANE—Barring news of importance from abroad over the weekend we would anticipate no marked trend in quotations in Saturday's short session.

BEER & CO.—We look for a resumption of the upward trend in the next day or so.

COTTON OPINIONS.

COURTS & CO.—With the high rate of domestic consumption expected to continue through the fall, we would favor buying cotton whenever hedges cause recessions.

FENNER & BEANE—We look for the market to develop a rising trend as soon as hedges let up.

BEER & CO.—We still favor buying cotton around current levels.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO. TO DOBBS & CO.—We cannot see that there has been any reason to modify view of the technical position based on the last crop indications. Liverpool October due 6.62.

GRAIN OPINIONS.

COURTS & CO.—With the world position of wheat soundest for many years and steadily growing stronger, we would expect higher levels.

FENNER & BEANE—We think the market is shaping for more activity and higher prices.

BEER & CO.—For the next few sessions, barring any marked influence from the news, both wheat and corn, in our opinion, will move in "trading limits," possibly establishing a trend.

DOBBS & CO.—We feel that corn having assumed leadership followed by Canada that higher prices will prevail in our futures.

PARIS RAIL STOCKS GAIN.

PARIS, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Rail shares and bank stocks closed higher on the bourse. Bank of France was firm at 5,885 francs compared with 5,780 yesterday, and rentes showed a gain of 20 to 35 centimes. The remainder of the list was irregular.

Bank Clearings

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Only five business days were included in the latest week's report of bank clearings, against six days a year ago. This was due to the Labor Day holiday, which fell a week later this year than in 1935. The total, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., for 22 leading cities in the United States for the five days ended Wednesday, September 9, was $4,229,544,000, against $4,686,763,000 for the week ended September 11, 1935, a loss of 9.8 per cent. This contrasted with a gain of 37.1 per cent a week earlier.

At New York city, the aggregate fell to $2,696,971,000 from $3,871,534,000 in the full week preceding, and $2,979,256,000 a year ago. This represented a decline of 9.5 per cent.

The amount for the current period at outside centers was $1,532,573,000, a decline of 10.2 per cent from last year's total. From the amount reported for the previous period, total clearings were smaller by $1,612,726,000. Between the two comparative weeks in 1935 there was an increase of $425,737,000.

Despite the short week, three cities showed gains over the totals for the full week of last year. These were New Orleans, Louisville and Dallas. Decreases were registered at all other centers.

Figures at leading cities, compared with those of 1935, are printed herewith: also, daily bank clearings for June, July, August and for September to date:

Sugar and Coffee.

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Raw sugar was unchanged today at 3.65 for spots. No sales were reported, although offerings at this price appeared to be a little more liberal, with buyers showing no further interest.

Aside from November which was lower under increased liquidation and hedge selling apparently influenced by the disappointing action of the spot market, futures held generally steady today on trade and commission house buying. There were 39 notices issued against September contracts but these were readily stopped and the spot month remained unchanged, while new crops, after advancing a point eased partially under realizing. Final prices were 4 points lower on November and unchanged to 1 lower on other active positions. Sales 9,550 tons, of which 5,550 tons were in November alone.

Refined was unchanged at 4.65 to 4.75 for fine granulated with fair withdrawals reported. The government report placed the beet sugar production at 9,056,000 tons, or about 15 per cent above last year's outturn, on which the trade figured an outturn based on the same yield as last year of 1,440,000 short tons of beet sugar, which compared with 1,261,000 short tons produced in 1935. The Louisiana cane sugar crop was placed at 3,735,000 tons, against 4,087,000 harvested last year, which would yield 289,000 tons of sugar, if the usual outturn of 155 pounds of sugar per ton of cane were maintained in 1936.

FLINT RIVER LEAGUE.

The final series of games in the Flint River league will be played Saturday afternoon with Porterdale facing a tough foe in McDonough, a team that was very strong at the first of the season, and is showing signs of awakening. Fayetteville is the other contender for season's honors and they meet Milstead.

THE SCHEDULE.

McDonough at Porterdale.
Fayetteville at Milstead.
Jonesboro at Ola.

ATLANTA LEAGUE.

The playoff in the Atlanta league will start Saturday. Exposition Mills won the second half of the season with a perfect record, while Central Cafe won the first half with one defeat. These two meet in the first game at the Exposition grounds this week and the second game will be played at the Central Cafe diamond at a time decided by the managers. The third game will be decided by the flip of a coin if needed.

COMMERCIAL LEAGUE.

Gulf Refining and Dixisteel will meet at Glenn field this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the first game of a three-game series for the baseball championship of the Atlanta Commercial league.

Dixisteel, the defending champions, won the first half undefeated but lost three games in the last half. Gulf won the last-half championship in a thrilling climax after Dixisteel had tied them for the crown with a postponed game still on the schedule.

The championship of the league will be awarded with a league trophy as well as the American Bakeries cup, which must be won three times before it is permanently owned. The Bakeries cup is not in possession of Dixisteel, last year Commercial league champions. Both clubs are on equal terms as far as the Bakeries cup is concerned. Gulf held the cup for one year after winning the championship of its division two years ago.

Leonard Mayo and Lefty Everett, ace pitchers for Dixisteel and Gulf, respectively, will be the choice of the teams Saturday.

Harry Cooper, outfielder for White Provision baseball team in the Atlanta Commercial league, won the league hitting trophy with an average of .426 for the season. Cooper batted 68 times and played in 16 games. W. Patterson, of Dixisteel, was second with an average of .367, and Garner, of Dixisteel, was next with .352.

The final game of the S. S. A. A. A. baseball playoff, scheduled between Ankyra Class and Gordon Street Berean Class, has been postponed until Saturday week.

GRANT BEATEN BY FRED PERRY

usually spotless Briton couldn't have been more mussed up if he had slid into third base.

Perry won the fourth set, 6-2, and the match, 6-4, 3-6, 7-5, 6-2.

Perry was more like himself in the fourth and final set and gave Bitsy more to run at than he could handle. He seemed refreshed by the 10-minute intermission and went right out for Grant when play was resumed, breaking Bitsy in the first game after the southerner had wiped out a 0-40 deficit.

Donald Budge, the chief American contender, defeated Frank Parker, of Spring Lake, N. J., 6-4, 6-3, 6-3, today and gained the final round and the championship.

FINE SHOWING.

It was by far the best showing Budge has made on American turf this summer and heartened the hopes of his supporters that he will preserve the championship against the dangerous challenge from Fred Perry, English winner of the title in 1933 and 1934.

Parker played in his usual sparkless, business-like manner and never really was on even terms with Budge except for a brief stretch at the start of the second set. Budge unlimbered all of his weapons, and thrilled 5,000 spectators as he brought off exactly 40 placements on forecourt volleys and beautifully executed ground strokes from close to his baseline deep into Parker's side lines.

Helen Jacobs, of Berkeley, Cal., vanquished Kay Stammers, pretty British southpaw, 6-4, 6-3, and advanced to the finals of the United States singles tennis championship in her bid for her fifth straight title.

Alice Marble, the blond-haired San Francisco girl who was forced out of competition two years ago owing to an injury suffered in Paris, gained the final by defeating Helen Pedersen, of Stamford, Conn., 6-1, 6-1.

football practices to scrutinize carefully any and all those asking to be admitted.

And if a little guy wearing no clothes at all and carrying a bow with some arrows, asks to get in, he is to be given the bum's rush and the police are to be called.

Love, sweet love, is coming to be just as much of a football problem for coaches as is that of replacing the tackle and quarterback who graduated last spring.

Up at the University of Tennessee, Coach Bob Neyland has issued orders that any player who marries will be fired off the squad.

This sounds good and the major means it. Unless, of course, it is a GOOD football player who marries. He will be forgiven and kept on the squad, probably on the promise he will not marry again.

Georgia Tech has just lost a promising player because of marriage. And the other day, while visiting at Baton Rouge, La., and at L. S. U., the L. S. U. people were bemoaning the loss of a good tackle who had just married and left school. He was dropped from the squad when he left. And will not be reinstated to the squad unless, I imagine, he returns to school.

Hardly a football squad in Dixie is lacking in its quota of married players. The romance bacillus of the college campus is a very potent bacillus.

It is quite a problem and the coaches are at their wits ends as to how to halt it. They attempt to frighten the boys by promising to drop them from the squads. But if any really GOOD player marries, they don't drop him. Really GOOD players aren't dropped.

THAT SUNDAY GAME.

Those Crackers of ours, who have won their second consecutive pennant, come home Sunday for the final game of the year.

A great afternoon should be in store for the fans who attend. The old-timers are to play a three-inning game and there are other attractions.

Alarm continues to grow over the play-off. The club is not in the best of shape in the pitching department. And with Paul Richards hurt the batting strength is lessened.

Still, with Leonard, Thomas, Durham, Williams and Lindsey ready, I believe we can do it.

A little work for Lindsey and he might halt them.

He had the best record in the Shaughnessy series and the Dixie series last year.

ALL-STAR SQUAD FAILED TO TRAIN FOR PRO BATTLE

'Partying,' Failure To Appear for Drills Admitted by Coaches.

By George Kirksey.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11—(UP)—Now it can be told. The New York Giants' 12-2 victory over the college all-stars at the Polo Grounds Tuesday night was a keen disappointment to those who knew the setup for the game.

The eastern professional champions missed the greatest chance the postgraduate players ever had to deal a crushing blow to the collegians' claims that they play the better brand of football. Despite the fact that they lost to the Giants, the all-sars actually increased the prestige of college football with those acquainted with the mental and physical condition of the all-Americans.

Ever since their 7-7 tie with the Detroit Lions at Chicago a week ago, the college players were out on a big joyride. They took the game about as seriously as a major league baseball team takes an exhibition game with a Class D club in the spring. Few of the players observed training rules and some of the violations were so flagrant that one player didn't even practice the day before the game because of a night of celebrating. Another prominent player confessed that he wanted to get the game over as quickly as possible so that he could go out on a party.

NO DISCIPLINE.

The coaches knew what was going on but had no discipline over the players. During one of the training sessions in Chicago, Coach Bernie Bierman, of Minnesota, drove the squad through a three-hour workout and almost started a rebellion. After that Bierman discarded the tactics he used to send Minnesota through the past three years unbeaten, and preserved peace by letting the players do almost as they pleased.

"I saw the kids were holiday bent," said Bierman, "and had no desire to play football. I don't blame them much because hard training is drudgery but you have to go through it if you want to win football games. Since they were in no mood to take the game seriously, I let them have their way, more or less. I knew, too, that I probably could get more out of them in the game even though they might not be in the right condition."

In one talk to the collegians Bierman cracked down on the all-stars, many of whom were impressed with their reputations.

"My second team at Minnesota could beat this bunch without any trouble," snapped Bierman.

NEWSPAPER PLAYERS.

Coach Bo McMillin, of Indiana, who assisted Bierman, said in a talk before the Chicago game: "I want to see which of you are real football players and which are newspaper players."

After the Giants' game, McMillin said:

"A lot of them are still newspaper football players as far as I'm concerned."

Elmer Layden, Notre Dame, who also was an assistant coach, thinks that his mentor, Knute Rockne, was correct when he said that there was no substitute for enthusiasm where football is concerned.

"College players have the enthusiasm and the will to win," said Layden. "Professional players don't, that's all. A boy has got to have the urge to play football up to the hilt. This gang of all-stars didn't have it."

The three college coaches agree that a topnotch college team like Minnesota, Princeton, Stanford, Southern Methodist, Louisiana State or Ohio State among last year's elect could give the best professional team a licking every Saturday in the season.

NEYLAND'S VOLS ARE UNDERDOGS FOR FIRST TIME

Major Likes New Setup; Hints Surprise or Two This Fall.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 11.—(AP)—Major Robert R. Neyland places the University of Tennessee football team in the role of "underdog" this season.

It is a new gridiron "spot" for the retired army major whose Tennessee football teams of former years rated near the top in the Southeastern conference.

But the broad-shouldered major, back as head coach after a year's army assignment in the Panama Canal Zone, likes it.

"It puts us in a position to beat some of the favored teams in the south," he said. "We have a small squad, lacking in experience, but it has a marvelous spirit and determination. You may be surprised at the things it does."

40-MAN SQUAD.

Forty men comprise the squad, compared with 50 to 60 in former years. There are 25 sophomores and from these untried youngsters Coach Neyland and his aids will fashion largely the 1936 Vols.

"We lost three centers, four quarterbacks and two halfbacks through graduation," Neyland said. "Left were one reserve center, five guards, one tackle, two ends and three halfbacks."

The Vols appear to best fortified in the backfield. The line is a guestion mark and there is a shortage on reserve material.

Phil Dickens, 177-pound senior triple threat; Woodrow Derryberry, a senior; and Harry Epperson, a junior, will play quarterback. They also are being groomed for halfback positions since 150-pound Red Harp is the only experienced halfback on the squad.

Big Joe Dougherty, converted guard, will carry fullback duties, assisted by Joe Wallen, 185-pound sophomore and promising punter, and Cheek Duncan, also a first-year man. William McCarren and Bob Sneed, also sophomores, are promising halfbacks.

SOPH ENDS.

For ends, Coach Neyland has three sophomores, Gerald Hendricks, Ralph Eldred and Bowden Wyatt, and Jim Potter and Ralph Maxwell, upper classmen. Captain Dewitt Weaver and Bill Morrell, seniors, and Joe Black Hayes and George Koleas, juniors, head the list of guards.

Robert Fulton, who is 6 feet 3 and weighs 215 pounds, Frank Crawford and Austin Shofner are experienced tackles. Two sophomores, Bob Woodruff and Sam Levine, are likely prospects. Joe Little and Van Kelly, sophomores, and Allen Ramsey, a junior, are candidates for center.

TARZAN AND THE MAYAN GODDESS No. 66

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

S-66
© 1936, Edgar Rice Burroughs, Inc.—Tm. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

As the inverted image of the beast sprang into his vision, Tarzan tried to jack-knife his legs, grasp the rope, and pull himself up. But now he found that the trap had strained his leg muscles, and he was powerless to lift himself quickly from the beast's range!

From the beginning the jaguar sensed that its prey was helpless, and now it bounded confidently to sink its teeth into the man's jugular vein. With a mighty effort, Tarzan twisted his body barely in time to escape those vicious fangs, but a claw scraped his arm.

Hardly had the jaguar touched the ground than it sprang once more. Again Tarzan whipped his body out of range. At the same time he pulled his knife from his loincloth and struck out. The blade slashed the beast's hide, but the small wound merely added to its fury.

The tethered ape-man knew that his knife was of small advantage against the free-moving beast, which could spring from any angle. Thus began a mid-air game of leaping and dodging, a game of life and death. But the overwhelming odds were in favor of the beast!

'Undernourished Workers' Cited As Federation Urges Wage Hike

Industry's Ability To Increase Pay of Employes Bared in Labor Survey; Conditions in United States Compared With Sweden.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Reporting "widespread undernourishment" among wage earners, despite increased industrial profits, the American Federation of Labor said today "industry can well afford to raise workers' incomes."

In its monthly survey of business, the federation cited government statistics to support its charge of "widespread undernourishment" among employed workers. It also quoted from the findings of the international labor office at Geneva that "workers generally are better nourished in Sweden than the United States."

"This widespread undernourishment among employed wage earners lays a heavy responsibility at the door of the supreme court, which terminated NRA, the agency through which workers could have kept their incomes rising proportionately with business gains," the federation said.

Reporting that business activity had been "well sustained" during the summer, and that "the upswing has now gained enough momentum to offset such uncertainties as election prospects, warfare in Europe and crop shortages," the federation asked:

"What hope do these good business prospects hold for those who have never had enough to eat? The answer is, on the whole, very little."

The federation based its opinions on the food situation on studies made by the Labor and Agriculture Departments.

A study for employed workers incomes in north Atlantic cities, the federation said, showed that only 26 per cent met the (income) requirements for an adequate diet, while 30 per cent did not have enough food to meet minimum requirements.

Asking "what income will assure a satisfactory food budget for a family of four?" the survey said.

"The figures for Detroit indicate that families with less than $1,900 a year, for father, mother and two half-grown children, do not spend enough for food to buy the adequate diet at moderate cost."

International studies, the federation said, had shown the average low-paid worker in this country was no better fed than the average low-paid worker in other countries.

The federation maintained that an adequate diet for all would mean a vast increase in farming.

"If workers could buy even an adequate diet at moderate cost, farmers could produce needed food instead of piling up unnecessary surpluses," the survey said.

"This would mean adding 5,000,000 acres of fruit trees, doubling up our present production; 2,000,000 acres of truck crops, increasing production 66 per cent; adding 17,700,000 dairy cows, increasing our present herds 71 per cent.

"All this would mean better paid jobs for farmers and farm laborers and new opportunities for those homeless in the great midwestern dust bowl."

JUDGE TO RULE ON TVA VALIDITY

Federal Jurist Says Such Action Necessary To Settle Minor Cases.

COOKEVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 11.—(AP)—A suit of 19 power companies against the Tennessee Valley Authority received sudden impetus toward conclusion today when Federal Judge John J. Gore ruled that constitutionality of the TVA must be determined before a comparatively minor motion can be settled.

The power companies, in suits filed simultaneously in a state court at Knoxville and federal court at Birmingham, attacked the TVA act as unconstitutional, charged officers of the TVA had exceeded their authority and asserted that the 19 power companies, which operate in the TVA region, would suffer "irreparable injury" as a result of the power activities of the government agency.

Under the procedure he outlined, in his decision, however, Judge Gore will rule on the main issue of the entire suit—that of constitutionality—as a means of ruling on the motion, and an immediate appeal can then be taken by the losing side. This would have the effect of avoiding a long legal battle in the lower court.

"If the act is valid," he said, "even though the officers of the TVA had exceeded their authority, I think jurisdiction would be in the northern district of Alabama."

He asked attorneys to submit briefs on the question of exceeded authority also as it might have some bearing upon the issue of jurisdiction.

JUDGES TO NAME "MISS AMERICA"

Coveted Title To Be Awarded Tomorrow; Thousands Watch Parade.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 11. (AP)—A crowd estimated by Mayor C. D. White at 300,000 jammed Atlantic City's boardwalk today to watch the parade of pulchritude, main feature of the annual national beauty pageant.

Forty-eight beauties from various sections of the United States seeking the title "Miss America, 1936" waved to the applauding spectators.

Favorites with the crowds were "Miss Philadelphia," "Miss Connecticut," "Miss Birmingham," "Miss California" and "Miss Virginia Peninsula." The latter, in the person of Virginia Ash, rode on a float covered with gladiolas, snapdragons and red roses. She was dressed in a peach-colored dress.

Tomorrow night the 10 judges will determine which of them shall be known as "Miss America."

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Sept. 11. (AP)—Politically minded is the family of Will S. Clayton, head of one of the world's largest cotton firms at Houston, Texas.

Mrs. Clayton, at their summer home here, said today that she had been named a member of the Democratic national campaign finance committee and had "put about $7,000 into the fund."

In Washington it was announced that Mr. Clayton had given the Liberty League $1,250.

He said here today he was "opposed to Roosevelt and not for Landon."

"I'm afraid I'll be too busy to vote," he added.

Mrs. Clayton said their four daughters are working for Roosevelt and contributing to the campaign fund.

"My nineteen-year-old daughter, Julia, who is at Vassar, is too young to vote, but she contributed $1,000," she said.

LARGER DIRECTORY

New Issue To Include Hapeville, Avondale Estates.

Hapeville and Avondale Estates will be included in Atlanta's 1937 city directory, now being compiled by a corps of specially trained fact-finders under the direction of Larry Wolf, with headquarters in the Chamber of Commerce building.

In addition to the two suburbs of greater Atlanta which will be placed in the housholder's guide section, a bell-like symbol, designating homes with telephones, will be placed between the street number and the name of the householder, according to Mr. Wolf.

"Just as the city is growing bigger and better every year, so will the new edition of the directory be bigger and better, thus reflecting the growth and progress of the community," he said.

A corps of enumerators will canvass every residence, office, business, club and manufacturing plant in the city and surrounding territory. Mr. Wolf requests the public to co-operate with directory representatives so they may obtain complete and accurate information.

NEGRO'S LYNCHING AROUSES PROTEST

Women's Methodist Missionary Society Condemns "Mob Violence."

The executive committee of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Georgia Methodist Conference condemned yesterday the lynching of A. L. McCamy, a negro, near Dalton, last Sunday.

"The lynching cannot pass unnoticed and uncondemned," said a statement adopted unanimously at a meeting of the committee here. "For the fourth time in 10 months we are forced by the acts of Georgia citizens to condemn a specific crime of mob murder.

"We, the executive committee of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Georgia Conference, hold that this condemnation arises in part from the realization that these violations of the constitution and of the courts will inevitably lead to the destruction of our Christian civilization.

"Therefore, in a spirit of renewed courage we shall continue our fight against mob violence in every form and for any reason."

The committee is composed of officers and secretaries of the 10 districts of the North Georgia Conference.

The lynched negro was accused of an attempted attack on a white woman.

"I am deeply grateful to my friends who so generously and unselfishly supported me," Watkins stated yesterday.

Huge Boulder Dam Generator Hums As F.D.R. Touches Spark in Capital

BOULDER CITY, Nev., Sept. 11. (AP)—The world's greatest power giant bestirred itself today.

Boulder Dam started producing power. President Roosevelt pressed a button in Washington and the first flow of electricity started from the $165,000,000 government project.

Compared to the ultimate energy of 1,850,000 horsepower, today's coming to life of the power plant was akin to the twitching of a finger.

It was a 3,500-horsepower generator that started humming, just a house generator to supply needs at the dam and the federal construction city here.

A greater stride will be taken October 9 when one of the 15 115,000 horsepower generators start turning. That will send power some 300 miles to Los Angeles. In addition to the 15 generators of that size there will be two 55,000 horsepower generators in the ultimate installation.

The power giant signalized its coming to life with a rare spectacle. This was a double waterfall, 13 feet higher than Niagara, pouring from the two opposite canyon walls below the powerhouse.

It was the first test of the complete outlet works. This works consists of 12 needle valves, each 84 inches in diameter. Six are on the Arizona side and six on the Nevada side. They are 180 feet above the river.

From atop the highest dam in the world, 727 feet, thousands witnessed the scene. Ralph Lowery, reclamation service construction engineer in charge of the project, said opening of the 12 valves in the future will be a rare occurrence.

The world's largest concrete structure, Boulder Dam towers 727 feet into the air and creates a reservoir with a capacity of 30,500,000 acre feet. The project was started in 1928 under congressional act as a means of flood control, power generation, reclamation and water supply. Construction began in 1931.

Eventually electric power and water will flow from the project over a vast area of the southwest, reaching 300 miles into metropolitan areas of California.

In 50 years, engineers say, Boulder Dam will have paid for itself.

The valley of sorrow and pain;
But the God of all comfort was with us

And in the dark valley He whispers,
